Pioneers in Old Age.
What Is a Bigot?
One Baby Octopus.
More Brokers; Tickers.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928)

AMONG those wrecked on the ship Vestris 400 miles from shore were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Leuhaser, both past middle age, traveling third class, taking every dollar they had to begin life again in the Argentine.

THIS is the courage that has built up our Western country, particularly the Pacific Coast. Old people go there with their money, and descriptions they send back bring out the young people.

PROF. BOWMAN, of the department of economics in Columbia University, says this country "boasts of its religious freedom" and is cursed with bigotry. It is, and will be for some time.

There are Protestant bigots, Catholic bigots, Jewish bigots, each kind despising the other religions and sometimes making it clear.

FOR good measure there are Christian Scientists that think all the three religions need improvement.

A man is a "bigot" in the eyes of other religions when he takes his own religion too seriously.

EVEN Uncle Sam doesn't realize how big a country he owns, or what its prosperity is destined to be.

A few years ago there was much excitement because "the octopus Standard Oil" had run up in value to a thousand millions. Something must be done and WAS done.

THE octopus was cut into little pieces. One piece lives in New York, one in New Jersey, one in Indiana, one in California. And lots of other pieces without the name Standard Oil belong to the S. O. octopus family.

Now an item of financial news tells you that one of the baby octopuses, Mr. Teagle's Standard Oil of New Jersey, earned between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000 profit last year.

Big General Motors runs to many billions. A billion, no longer a scarecrow, is merely a unit of value.

AGAIN "Wild Trading Rush Resumed in Wall Street."

Brokers can scarcely handle the business; tickers cannot handle it.

Why not add 600 seats to the exchange? That would only make 1,200 active members. Five hundred of the existing 1,100 simply own their seats and don't trade on the exchange.

SELL new seats for $500,000 each, as the demand arises for them at that price. Divide the money, as is only just, pro rata among present owners of the seats.

THEN divide stocks into various classes, fast and slow, and run them on two tickers.

Each office would have two tickers and each little speculator could watch his own tape. There could be an active ticker and a dull ticker. And when an active stock turned dull it could be switched to the other ticker and the public notified.

THE saddest sight reported in regions devastated by the lava flood from Mt. Etna is a father and mother carrying their dead baby to a strange cemetery. Their plot in their own graveyard was covered by lava, 200 feet deep.

THE poor couple grieved because this baby could not be buried there and wondered how those already buried could get out through the lava.

Divine mercy and the angel Gabriel, fortunately, will attend to that.

NEW YORK will undertake seriously "to curb grafting in future." You read that and feel like saying with Job:

"Canst thou draw out Leviathan with an hook? Or his tongue with a cord which thou letest down?

"Canst thou put an hook in his nose? Or bore his jaw through with a thorn?"

THE modern Leviathan is graft, as powerful as old Leviathan or Behemoth of Job's day. "His bones are strong pieces of brass; his bones are like bars of iron."

Graft will last until the public takes a serious interest in it. The public is too busy now.

"FIFTY-FIFTY" in Chicago's gunman-citizen encounters yesterday.

A private citizen killed one gunman. A policeman shot and killed another.

Gunmen killed Charles Emmert and Matt Luck, both in drug stores.

When gunmen kill each other, Chicago does not object violently. But killing too many private citizens may cause annoyance.

THOUGHT LOST

Although dogged rescue crews today still hold forth hope, it is believed Earl DeVore and Norman Batten, auto racers aboard the S. S. Vestris, have been lost at sea.

SINKING IS LINER'S SECOND DISASTER

The sinking of the S. S. Vestris, British vessel of 10,000 tons, is that liner's second calamity. When fire broke out aboard the ship in September, 1919, it listed badly to the portside, as this picture of it shows, and almost sank. All aboard at that time were saved.

AS SHIPS HOVER AT DISASTER

6 DEAD, 110 MISSING AS HOPE FADES IN VESTRIS SINKING

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—One hundred and fifty survivors from the sunken liner Vestris were landed at New York today by two rescue ships.

The American Shipper had on board 127 passengers and members of the crew; the German liner Berlin carried 23 survivors, including five passengers and 18 seamen. Forty-four of the American Shipper's survivors were passengers.

The French tankship Myriam, with a quota estimated at 64 survivors, is due at New York late tonight.

A re-check of the rescue chart noon put the number of persons unreported, at 110.

Women and children suffered the heaviest casualties. They were sent off in the first lifeboats from the Vestris. Two of these boats sank; the third capsized.

CAPT. CAREY CRITICIZED

Some of the surviving passengers, upon reaching New York, bitterly criticized officers and seamen on the Vestris, claiming they were too slow in sending out SOS calls and in launching the boats. However, individual acts of heroism by the seamen were highly praised.

Not only did the captain of the Vestris lose his life, but his wireless officer, M. J. O'Loughlin, died too—both sacrificing their lives in performance of duty.

Avard Adams, chief engineer of the Vestris, was reluctant to talk. He said:

"I don't know what happened because I was in the engine room. I will say this—there was nothing wrong with the sea valve. I believe the cargo shifted some, but that's outside of my province. Just what happened is a mystery—but it will come out."

The United States battleship Wyoming, which picked up five women and three men, steamed, with a fleet of coast guard cutters, all night over the scene of the disaster, but failed to find any more survivors. She is expected to put into Hampton Roads, Va., late today. Forty-four of the American Shipper's 127 survivors were passengers.

SEAMAN CRITICAL

Capt. Frederick Sorenson, a passenger of the Vestris, who holds a master's license, was particularly bitter in his criticism of what he

FIRST 3 BOATS OF VESTRIS FOUNDER

By DAVID P. SENTNER.
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Of the first three lifeboats that put off from the stricken Vestris, containing women and children, two sank and one capsized.

While the launching of the boats was in progress the Vestris turned over in the water and panic-stricken passengers climbed from the water upon the keel, clinging there until the hulk sank.

These grim facts were brought to port today by the five passengers and 18 seamen who were snatched from death by the liner Berlin.

DOOMED BY TRADITION

It was the old order of the sea—"women and children first"—that cost so many lives among the women and children on the liner. And it was the irony of fate that the order which usually is the salvation of women and children should have brought them doom in the foundering of the Vestris.

The survivors on the Berlin brought a grewsome picture of the tragedy which followed the launching of the open boats. The passengers, while on shipboard and in the face of danger, remained calm, but panic followed the disaster to the lifeboats in the water.

As the rolling seas swamped and sank two of the boats and the other turned keel up, screams of agonized fear came from the water—filled with wreckage and struggling forms of women and children.

MORE OF CREW SAVED

A check-up of the rescue chart showed more seamen saved over passengers.

The Lamport and Holt officers said 128 passengers and 200 members of the crew shipped aboard the Vestris from New York.

On the American Shipper there were more than twice as many members of the Vestris' crew as there were passengers. On the Berlin were more than three times as many seamen as passengers, while the Myriam had more than six times as many members of the crew as there were passengers.

Only the Wyoming had more passengers than seamen on board and her rescues were comparatively small.

U. S. SEIZES RUM BOND OF LIEUT.

One minute's delay cost Police Lieut. James J. Callahan $5,000 in Federal Court today.

Callahan, on trial with 45 others on charges that they are all members of a gigantic North Side rum ring, was late in appearing in Federal Court for the second day of the trial.

At 10 o'clock, time scheduled for court opening, Judge R. M. Gibson announced that if Callahan appeared before 10:20 o'clock he would escape with a $100 fine.

At 10:20 o'clock Callahan was still absent. Judge Gibson declared his $5,000 bond forfeited.

At 10:21 o'clock Callahan walked into the courtroom!

100 WITNESSES

When Callahan finally appeared the prosecuting officer, United States Assistant Attorney Ralph H. Smith, prepared to draw further on the army of 400 witnesses whose testimony he is banking on to win convictions against the politicians, po-

BANDIT SHOOTS TURTLE CREEK HUCKSTER

Shot down while resisting a robber early today, Harry Walinski, 48, of 113 Dinwiddie street, a huckster, was believed to be dying in the Braddock General Hospital.

The shooting occurred in a stable in Brown avenue, Turtle Creek, where Walinski kept the horses he used in a Turtle Creek valley produce business. The robber obtained $2.

Walinski was found semi-conscious by persons attracted by the firing of the shot. The gunman fled. Walinski was too weak to furnish police a description of his assailant.

2nd Man Killed on Same Road by Auto

MARTINS FERRY, O., Nov. 14.—An automobile carrying men to work in the Yorkville steel plant ran down and killed John Kanyuh, 61, retired coal miner, on Ohio River road north of this city, this morning. The accident was the second of its kind within three months on a 200-yard stretch of road.

TIN PATCH ON LIFEBOAT CHARGED BY SURVIVOR

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Dramatic details of the disaster that befell the ill-fated liner Vestris, 240 miles off the Virginia Capes, were related by 127 survivors of the shipwreck who arrived in New York today aboard the American Merchant liner American Shipper, which rescued them from lifeboats and pieces of wreckage as they were bobbing about in the waves.

All of them told of the night of horror after the Vestris sank. Some were so nerve-shaken by their experiences that they could not talk.

Wrapped in blankets and some of them without shoes, the 44 passengers and 83 members of the crew that were rescued by the American Shipper were in a state of near collapse when they set foot on shore. About 40 of them were treated aboard ship for immersion and injuries.

"I shudder when I recall what happened," said Mrs. Earl De Vore, of Los Angeles, the wife of an automobile racer who was rescued after she had been tossed about in two different lifeboats for hours. Her husband is missing.

SAW HUSBAND DISAPPEAR

Mrs. De Vore, whose bravery all the passengers extolled, told her story in a quiet, tremulous voice. She was worried—heartbroken in fact, because she is sure her husband went to his death. The last she saw of him he was being swallowed up by a wave.

"I knew long before the ship went down that we were in danger," Mrs. De Vore related. "We were not alarmed, however, because all the passengers had been assured what a good ship the Vestris was. We knew one SOS had gone out Sunday afternoon, but that it had been cancelled. Then the weather became rougher and huge streams of water poured over the ship and ripped through the hatches and another SOS was sent

RETURNS FAVOR METRO PLAN AMENDMENT

Nearly complete returns collected and tabulated by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph indicate that the Pittsburgh Metropolitan District amendment has been approved by the voters of the state.

With less than 12 per cent of the districts unreported, the amendment has a lead of 21,317 votes. The vote in 7,599 of the 8,571 precincts was:

For	391,375
Against	370,058

The 972 missing districts include 160 in Pittsburgh, 248 in other sections of Allegheny County and 564 in the rest of Pennsylvania.

BELIEVED OVER THE TOP

The heavy favorable vote in Pittsburgh seems to have put the amendment over the top, although Philadelphia and Delaware County contributed comparatively heavy majorities.

The Allegheny County districts included in the totals gave the amendment a majority of 53,402 votes. The princincts outside the county included above rolled up a lead of 32,085 against it.

Returns available indicate the amendment was carried in only six counties—Allegheny, Becks, Delawre ,Luzerne, McKean and Philadedphia. The result in Beaver, with a number of districts still missing, is in doubt. The same is true of Berks, Clearfield and Northampton, the returns from which are not available.

BENEFITS ASSESSMENT

There is a possibility that another Pittsburgh amendment has been approved—that providing for the assessment of non-abutting property to pay for public improvements such as a subway, bridges and new highways. This is known as the benefit assessment plan.

Returns from 59 of the 67 counties show this amendment trailing by only 1,727 votes. The districts missing in that total include 581 in Allegheny. Many of these are in Pittsburgh, where this amendment is getting a large favorable vote.

MME. YASHIO INOUYE

Mme. Yashio Inouye, wife of the Japanese Army major aboard the boat, is believed to have been saved. Her husband is reported missing. Dr. William R. Sears, Brooklyn, the ship's doctor, is reported saved.

TROLLEY HEAD SILENT ANENT SALARIES

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

The one-man car is a necessary economy; the best street car service possible under present circumstances is being given, and the 25 cents bus fare is essential.

These were the high points of the answer made today by A. W. Robertson, president of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, to the questions asked by the transportation committee of the Allied Boards of Trade.

The reply constitutes a voluminous document, complete publication of which is impossible. Mr. Robertson refused to answer one question which requested a list of salaries paid to individual officials.

He did state, however, that the 12 general officers of the Pittsburgh Railways Company received a total of $6,469.45 in September, 1928, compared with $6,516.65 received by 11 men in January, 1926.

ACCIDENTS REDUCED

In replying to the questions on one-man cars, Mr. Robertson said:

"Our accident records indicate that the one-man car does not present an increased hazard to the public. The fair comparison of accidents resulting from one-man and two-man car operation is on the basis of the car mileage operated. In comparison with 1923, there has been effected, during 1928, a reduction in accidents from

Capt. Carey Dead Is Rescue Ship's Message

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Definite word of the death of Capt. William J. Carey, master of the Vestris, was brought today by the rescue ship Berlin.

Belief that Capt. Carey and Radio Chief O'Loughlin perished, was voiced over the air today in a radio message from the steamship Voltaire, sister ship of the ill-fated liner. The message said:

"Makeshift raft still missing and probably broken up. We now crossing track of disaster; not yet seen anything around except the searchers. Looks like captain and radio operator went down with ship."

WILKINS SOON TO MAKE FIRST ANTARCTIC FLIGHT

By CAPT. SIR GEORGE HUBERT WILKINS.
Commander of the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition.

(Copyright, 1928, by the New York American, Inc., and by Universal Service. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.)

DECEPTION ISLAND, Antarctic, Nov. 14.—(By radio from the Whaler Hektoria, via Port Stanley, Falkland Islands)—We are about ready to make the first airplane flight ever made by anyone in Antarctica.

Our American Lockheed-Vega monoplane, Los Angeles, in which Lieut. Eielson and I flew over the North Pole, made further history when it was the first complete airplane to touch Antarctic soil.

Six days ago the sturdy prow of the whaler Hektoria entered the harbor here and dropped anchor. We then moored the whaler to the beach with six seven-inch hawsers.

WEATHER GOOD

We are now prepared to withstand the customary November storms. So far we have had fine weather. This is a "break" which has enabled everyone from captain to messboy and members of the expedition to keep busy.

Every waking hour we have been industriously on the job. We have been locating the troubles with our radio aerials, and overcoming many faults. Today we heard San Francisco for the first time. We expect soon to arrange a schedule for direct communications.

Upon entering Deception Island harbor, Lieut. Eielson and Crossan soon spotted some penguins. Soon all were gazing in delight at these

When Clarence "Red" Terhune, the St. Louis lad lionized in Germany and returned to this country in state because he stowed away aboard the "Graf Zeppelin," ocean-crossing dirigible, arrived in New York on the S. S. Ile de France, the only relative to meet him was Mrs. Edna Hall, his sister.

Hunting Accident Kills W. Va. Man

DELAY IN LOWERING BOATS REVEALED BY ILL-FATED SHIP'S PASSENGER

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(INS.)—T. E. Mack, a construction engineer of Teola, Wyoming, who was on his way to Brazil, gave a vivid description of the storm and difficulty experienced in lowering the boats, as he landed here today with other survivors of the foundered liner Vestris.

"The hurricane," he said, "started Sunday at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Soon there was a decided list of the ship which continued all day. Sunday night the ship started to roll like a bottle and she began to list more and more on the starboard side as each hour passed.

"The passengers became nervous. All the paraphernalia on the port side was ripped from their fastenings, but at 8 a. m., Monday, when the sea became calmer and the gale died down, the starboard side continued to list more heavily.

"In fact, it was dipping into the sea. Capt. Carey ordered all passengers on deck and ordered the life belts distributed. Then the crew began to lower the lifeboats.

DELAY IN LOWERING BOATS

"It took two hours to lower four lifeboats, Nos. 4, 6, 8, 10," Mack emphasized, "and while No. 8 was being lowered she crashed into the side of the ship, stoving in the lifeboat.

"The passengers, most of whom were women and children, tumbled into the water."

"It was a horrible sight," Mack continued. "Confusion soon overwhelmed the passengers who had not yet got into the lifeboats. From every side there came the screaming and howling of women and children.

"One woman in lifeboat No. 8 had two children with her. When the boat tumbled into the water her life preserver was torn from her and all three fell into the sea. They disappeared.

"Throughout all the panic Capt. Carey appeared calm, but he also appeared undecided as to what to do. Lifeboats No. 4 and No. 6 were lowered so late that they capsized."

Mack gave considerable credit to the calm attitude of John Bolger, first mate of the Vestris, and Alfred Duncan, second steward, both of whom, he said, were greatly responsible for quieting the women and children after lifeboat No. 8 fell into the water. Bolger, Mack said, was one of the last to leave the ship.

Mack said his watch stopped at 2:35 p. m. on Monday and from this fact he fixed the time of the sinking of the Vestris.

He said some people who jumped from the ship were sucked in with the awful swirl as she went down. Mack accounted for the heavy loss of life among women and children by the fact that the first three boats to be launched were wrecked and that the ship went down almost immediately after, dragging the swimming passengers after it.

FINDS PAL IN WATER

Swimming in the water for two and a half hours Mack finally located O. L. Maxey, his traveling companion.

"We had been pals so long we decided to die like pals," said Mack, "so we swam on together. Maxey was very courageous."

Maxey said the same thing about Mack. Both were rescued aboard the Berlin.

Mack said that he and Maxey swam alongside lifeboat No. 13, and that the passengers wouldn't let them in. Finally Chief Engineer Alvard Adams made room for them and they were saved.

Carl Schmidt, of Chicago, was one of the heroes of the disaster, according to the other passengers rescued on the Berlin. Schmidt would not talk about himself.

"I have nothing to say," said Schmidt, a quiet, slow-speaking fellow. He walked phlegmatically away from the group of rescued passengers on the deck.

Schmidt swam in the open sea for 21 hours before being picked up.

Three Negroes from the Vestis' crew proved themselves heroes. They were in the water while the liner was sinking, swimming through the wreckage not far from the stricken vessel.

Finally they swam in close and wrenched from its davits a lifeboat—No. 13—from the second cabin section. The Negroes manned this boat and then paddled away through the floating debris picking up such persons as they could from the water. It was this boat that saved O. L. Maxey and T. E. Mack.

Archibald Bannister, boatswain's mate, told a more technical story of the disaster and the last moments of the Vestris.

Bannister said eight lifeboats got safely away from the listing Vestris. The first three boats were smashed almost immediately after the ship went down.

The survivors, Bannister said, saw the lights of five rescue ships off across the sea in the night but could not attract attention. He said those were the worst minutes of the night as the big liners moved all about the 22 in the lifeboat who huddled helpless and saw them move off again.

Bannister said the lifeboat passed through a storm before being picked up by the Berlin.

PRAISES RADIO OPERATOR

The boatswain's mate said he last saw Capt. Carey standing on the port side just before the Vestris sank and said he believes the master went down with his ship.

Bannister also believes the radio operator, Michael O'Loughlin, went down in the Vestris. One of the last to jump from the fast heeling-over vessel, Bannister said he heard the sputter of the radio instrument even as he jumped. O'Loughlin, Bannister said, was still at his post trying to make the fast weakening signals of his set heard across the water.

Almost immediately the ship heiled over and within two minutes went down by the stern, Bannister related.

At the pier today members of the Vestris' crew acted as though they had been instructed not to discuss the details of the disaster until they had reported to the ship's owners. Second Steward A. Duncan said that water rolled into the coal bunkers, but he thought it was coming from an open hatch as the seas were high and were washing over the decks. He said he did not know if there was a leak in the ship's hull.

6 DEAD, 110 MISSING

called the "criminal neglect" which he said marked the disaster.

"I know about ships," he said. "The reason the vessel foundered was criminal neglect. The captain did everything wrong. He should have had ships standing by us long before he did so not a passenger would have been sent overboard before other vessels were standing by."

ADMIRAL'S HOPE GONE

The list of known survivors from the Vestris stood at 222 today with search continuing for other possible survivors among the 110 passengers and crew still missing. Six are known dead. At least 20 of the missing are children.

Vice Admiral M. M. Taylor, aboard the U. S. S. Wyoming and in charge of rescue operations, early today radioed he had abandoned all hope of finding further survivors. The rescue fleet, however, is to continue its search.

United States Navy and coastguard ships reported by wireless at daybreak that they were still combing the surface of the seat at the scene of the tragedy, 275 miles off the Virginia Shoals. But up to late today they had not reported the discovery of either survivors or dead.

Ten persons in all were rescued while floating in the water. Capt. Schuyler F. Cummings master of the American Shipper, radioed he had picked up a man and a woman who were clinging to bits of wreckage. They had been in the water for 18 hours.

TELL OF TERRORS

Some word of the harrowing experiences suffered by the passengers and crew of the Vestris was gleaned here from the terse messages of passengers.

Mrs. John K. Batten, of Los Angles, aboard the Wyoming, radioed to relatives:

"I am alive after terrifying experiences. Thought sure I would never see you again."

One lifeboat was so close to the Vestris that it was dragged down into the trough of the sea when the liner pitched. Waves which dashed against the side of the ship rolled back over the lifeboat and its occupants. This boat already was overcrowded and the water swamped it. The frightened passengers, hurled into the icy water, swam towards another open boat, which was already crowded almost to capacity.

The roar of the crashing waves was pierced by the shrill screams of frightened women and the shouts of the men. The voices of panic-stricken children rose in wails of fright and despair. On board the ship the officers were shouting orders through megaphones which could not be heard.

BIG WAVES BATTER BOATS

Sky and sea conspired together to add fresh horrors. There was not a ray of sunshine piercing the murk.

Carried on a 50-mile wind, the white capped combers smashed over small boat and liner, carrying away everything movable. The water around the ship was filled with wreckage. But, this proved an aid in some cases where persons of poor swimming ability grasped pieces of spar and deck covering to reinforce the assistance given by their life belts.

The ship was heeling over to an angle of nearly 35 degrees, owing to the masses of water which flooded the starboard holds and was battered fore and aft by billows nearly 29 feet high.

She went to Palo Alto from Hollywood, where she was initiated into the famous Breakfast Club, given the film folks' "ham and egg" degree and made to ride the wooden horse "Ham," upon which she is above.

GRAFT JURY PROBES BIG LOTTERY

The spotlight of the county graft-probing grand jury was turned today on ticket-printing activities in the so-called $140,000 North Side lottery racket.

Two sons and a nephew of Justice of the Peace A. F. Reed, of Greentree, whose office is alleged to have housed printing equipment for supplying tickets for the big lottery, were summoned to tell what they know of the illicit game.

Clarence and Arthur F. Reed, sons, and C. W. Wall, nephew of Squire Reed, were on a hunting trip when the office was raided. On their return they were subpenaed and were ready to testify before the probers today. All are said to have been employed in the lottery print shop.

Frank (Babe) Kelly, Second Ward politician, was summoned, because of a tip received by District Attorney S. H. Gardner in an anonymous letter. The prosecutor disclosed that he receives from 25 to 50 letters a day, mostly unsigned, but he reads each one in quest of information bearing on the lottery ring.

lice, racketeers and others who, the government charges, set up a monopolistic, unlawful sale of police protection and booze.

The trial passed the preliminary stage this afternoon when witnesses to support the government charge of conspiracy were called. The first was Charles Berger, brought here from the Atlanta Penitentiary, who entered a plea of guilty to the conspiracy charge as well as to other charges. His name was called just before the noon recess. Calling of Barger as a government witness indicated to defense counsel that he would testify against those on trial.

Just as he did yesterday, Prosecutor Smith opened his attack today by calling prohibition agents who testified about raids which later brought the indictment of some of the less important defendants. It was apparent that Smith was building the foundation for the attack which he hopes will eventually convict the notable defendants, such as Assemblyman S. J. Grenet, Police Inspector Charles Faulkner and several ward chairmen.

Today's first witnesses were Agents Oliver Gettel, James L. Delaney and Mike Cimbalisco. Cimbalisco testified that when he arrested Joe Laverde, moonshine-laden, at 2831 Preble avenue, Laverde said the moonshine belonged "to the gang." The court struck out his testimony on motion of Defense Counsel Prichard because Laverde, although indicted, has never been apprehended.

Cimbalisco was followed on the stand by Agents Samuel Eisler, J. E. Hockenberger, Charles S. Johnson, William W. Marshall and H. W. Olsen, all telling of raids they took part in.

The number of defendants was reduced by the incidents of the first day of trial yesterday. Seven defendants entered pleas of guilty or no defense. With other defendants unable to be placed on trial because of illness, in addition to 12 not apprehended, the number on trial was reduced to 46. Three previously had entered pleas of nolo contendere.

Judge R. M. Gibson, trial judge, ordered the jury confined for the duration of the trial. The corridors of the Federal Building again were thronged with witnesses today, excluded from the courtroom by the court order which permitted only defendants, their counsel and newspapermen in the room.

grotesque birds and their amusing antics.

We spent the day seeking landing fields and beaches suitable for launching a seaplane. Eventually we discovered a convenient place near the whaling station. The machine can be dragged from the water there and can have its pontoons exchanged for wheels. The plane will then be taxied about 200 yards to some snow-covered slopes where skis will replace the wheels. Then we will be ready for four first trial flights.

TO FLY SOON

Far down the harbor the flat ice is still unbroken. It will serve no one knows how long for takeoffs under big loads. Our reserve airplane soon will follow the Los Angeles ashore. Within a few days we will be able to make our first trial flight.

The Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Exploring Expedition set out from New York last September. The four members sailed to Montevideo, Uruguay, where they unloaded their airplanes and gear. In a few days they set out for the "bottom of the world" in the whaler Hektoria. They proceeded steadily southward, passing Falkland Islands. Flying from Deception Island they set out to establish a base some 60 miles south of there. Then they will take a succession of flights into the heart of Antarctica in the hope of compelling nature to yield her last secrets.

CITY FIXES POLICE FEET POUNDED FLAT BY COBBLES

REJUVENATING PITTSBURGH POLICEMEN

Between 70 and 80 city policemen and firemen daily receive from Chief Surgeon D. E. Sable, Public Safety Department, treatments among the latest known to medical science for rehabilitation of health. The treatments have reduced "lost time" about 30 per cent, it is estimated. Here, a city patrolman receives ultra-violet ray treatment to tone up body tissues.

"LIFTING" FALLEN ARCHES

Here, Patrolman John Pfeuffer, a veteran of 25 years on a beat, has his feet treated for the fallen arches that have come from constant pounding on sidewalks. Flat feet, dislocations, shattered nerves and other ailments are treated in this manner.

CITY POLICE AND FIREMEN PEPPED UP BY SABLE USING HEALTH RAYS

Rehabilitating the health of some 2,000 police and firemen by physiotherapy treatment, is the task undertaken by Chief Surgeon Daniel E. Sable, city public safety department.

Long, strenuous hours of duty have played havoc with the physical fitness of police and firemen. With councilmen standing pat in their refusal to increase the number of firemen and patrolmen, Dr. Sable literally is rebuilding what men are now in the departments.

Physical examinations of policemen and firemen held each year by the physician, have disclosed that the health of the men is not what it should be. Each year shows the health of the veterans becoming worse, and as pointed out, it is only a matter of a few more years, until hundreds of the firemen and policemen would be completely incapacitated and made unfit for active duty.

TONES UP BODIES

Realizing the impending doom of the men, Dr. Sable recently had installed in his clintic in City-County Building, the latest equipment devised by medical science to eliminate physical defect. Those whose bodies need toning up are given the ultra violet ray treatment. This treatment serves to build up tissues, and, in general, recondition the body. The infra-red ray treatment is another method used by Dr. Sable in the treatment of twisted ankles, dislocated joints and many other ailments pertaining to bones.

Flat feet, the greatest ailment found among patrolmen, are being corrected successfully by the physician through the use of a machine known as an articulator. The foot arches are strengthened and built up. Other disorders such as impaired mobility of the joints, removal of scar tissues and adhesions, faulty posture, sluggish blood action, chronic inflammation and contractions are being corrected by the articulator treatment.

80 UNDER TREATMENT

Between 70 and 80 police and firemen are receiving treatment daily for physical defects resulting from the performance of their duties. A complete card index of the condition of every patrolman and fireman is kept by Dr. Sable. With this system and the installation of the new equipment, the local public safety department's clinic is the most modern and up-to-date of any police department in the country.

Successful results have already crowned the work of Dr. Sable. Since the new equipment has been installed, it has been shown that the physiotherapy treatment has reduced the time off duty through disability of patrolmen and firemen nearly 30 per cent.

"What I hope to accomplish by the latest treatment is the elimination of physical defects," Dr. Sable said, "the rehabilitating of the men and restoring their health to its former condition."

SMITH APPEALS FOR NEW PARTY PROGRAM

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—After broadcasting an appeal to the Democratic party to develop and present to Congress a constructive national program, Gov. Alfred E. Smith today was intent on golf in the South.

Accompanied by a few friends he will have a two weeks' vacation near Biloxi, Miss.

The Governor in his speech, which was broadcast over 38 radio stations, also urged that Herbert Hoover—although he did not mention him by name—be given the cooperation of every citizen in the development of a program calculated to promote the welfare and best interests of the country.

NOT PARTY PRESIDENT

"It must be remembered," said the Governor, "that while political parties may seriously divide public opinion throughout the country during the progress of a campaign, after the American people have made their decision the man selected is not the president of the Republican party, but is the president of the United States.

"He is the president of all the people and as such he is entitled to the co-operation of every citizen in the development of a program calculated to promote the welfare and best interests of his country. He is entitled to a fair opportunity to develop such a program. Only when he fails to accomplish it does the administration become the subject of proper criticism of the opposition party."

The Governor denied the election was a "crushing defeat" for the Democratic party, which he asserted was still "a live, a vigorous and a forceful major minority party."

EXISTENCE NEEDFUL

The existence of such a party he declared necessary to serve as a check upon the majority party.

The Governor said that if the Democratic party in the next four years neglected to build up a constructive program and relied entirely upon the failure of the opposition party it would not be in a position to solicit the confidence and support of the American people.

"It would be regarded as a constructive achievement," he said, "if the Democratic party at Washington were to formulate a program, adopt it, offer it to the Congress of the United States and there defend it.

ANXIOUS FOR SUCCESS

"A refusal of the party in power to accept it or their inability to bring about party unity for the solution of these problems would then fix the responsibility and make a record upon which a successful campaign can be waged four years from now.

"I am just as anxious to see the party succeed as I was when it honored me with the nomination, and with all the vigor that I can command I will not only stand for them, but I will battle for them."

KING OF THE STOWAWAYS WOULD MEET HIS QUEEN!

By CLARENCE M. TERHUNE,
The World's First Aerial Stowaway.
(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Of the hundreds of thousands of folks who pass the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor every year on their return trips from Europe, I'll bet there was never a person more glad to get back to the good old U. S. A. than I am.

I have had a grand time over in Europe and have also done what I set out to do—that is, to be the first trans-Atlantic aerial stowaway. In addition to that I had a fine trip across Germany, Belgium and France and a wonderful ride home on board the steamer Ile de France, and all this leaves me feeling pretty good, as I come home a little more than two weeks after that Sunday night when I climbed into the mail bags on the Graf Zeppelin and put one over on the fellows who were watching against such a happening.

After seeing Europe I feel that there are lots of very fine folks over there and that it is a nice place to visit, but give me America every time as a place for my home. On November 20 I will be 20 years of age and I predict that there is no 20-year-old youth in this country who feels any prouder than I do at the present time.

CURED OF WANDERING

I think now that I was cured of wanting to wander around the country by the stowaway route. Since taking this trip to Europe by air I don't think there is much else left to accomplish in the way of going free of charge any more. I wouldn't take $10,000 for my experiences on this trip. The ocean is bigger than I ever thought it was.

I think that I prefer Zeppelin trans-Atlantic travel to riding even such a magnificient boat as the Ile de France. I like the speed the Zeppelin develops and I also like the absence of seasickness.

It was a new experience for me to have my breakfast served every morning in bed. I think I would rather get up each day and go after my own breakfast.

I had a very novel experience while in Berlin which I wish to tell you about. It started, you might say, in Friedrichshafen. When I landed there I received a telegram from Michael Bohnen, the opera star who used to sing at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York. He said he admired my nerve and that if I needed help he would pay my way back home. So when I went to Berlin I telephoned him and he invited me and my friends to come to the theater where he was playing in a show called Casanova. I went to see the show and between the acts he sent for me and I went back to his dressing room. Then he asked me if I would go on the stage and let him introduce me as the "blind passenger," which is the German name for a stowaway. I accepted the invitation and when I came on the stage I was well received and replied in a short speech in English, which I guess not many of the big audience understood. That was my first stage appearance and I hope not my last one.

DOESN'T CARE FOR BEER

After the show Mr. Bohnen and his wife who is better known as Mary Lewis, the American singer, invited me and my friends to go to a very old beer drinking place or stube as they call it in Berlin, where Wagner, Bismarck and many famous Germans used to go to drink their beer. We had a very enjoyable time there, but I could not drink much of their beer, as I do not like it.

My big hope now that I am back in America is that I'll be able to go into moving pictures. I think that's what I'll do if somebody gives me the chance. I would prefer that to going into vaudeville as I think I would be more at home before a camera than before an audience. I think I will stay in New York for a few days and then go out to St. Louis to see my sister and some of my friends. If I am lucky enough I'll go from there to Hollywood for a while. Mr. Casto, of Columbus, O., who was one of the passengers going over on the Zeppelin with me, said today that if I would stop off at his city for a day or so he would send me to St. Louis in an airplane which he owns. I think I will accept.

One of the first things I am going to do tomorrow is to get some American clothes. I am now wearing a suit which I bought in Germany and I feel funny in it. I think it is cut wrong and it hasn't the right color and I honestly hate to come out in the street wearing it. I wish I could put on the old red sweater, the corduroy trousers and the leather jacket I wore across on the Zeppelin. I feel lots easier in clothes of that sort than I do in the kind they call "street clothes."

THOUGHT HE WAS GIRL!

Speaking of these things reminds me of a good joke I had on some of the Zeppelin passengers on the way over to Germany. When I was discovered someone immediately spread the report that I was a girl disguised in boys' clothes. I don't know how they could think such a wild thing after one look at me, but some of them seemed to believe it. An American reporter came up to me and insisted on feeling my beard to see if it was the real thing or if it was something I had stuck on my face with gum to help deceive someone. I guess one feel of my chin and cheeks convinced the reporter, as he had no more doubts about me.

There is one person I'd like to see in the United States when I have a chance. It is Betty Simpson, the girl stowaway, who calls herself the Queen of Stowaways. She had crossed the Atlantic in the hold several times and the last I heard of her they had her in jail in England for 60 days as a vagrant character. If she's the Queen of Stowaways, then I guess I'm the king of them all, and the king ought to meet the queen.

Anxious Crowds Wait Rescue Ships' Return

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Crowds of persons, many uncertain as to whether their relatives and friends had been saved, gathered at daylight at the piers of the first two rescue ships bringing Vestris survivors. At Christopher street more than 1,000 gathered about the North German Lloyd Line piers, where the Berlin, bearing 25 of the survivors, docks.

"ZEPPELIN BETTER THAN DE LUXE LINER," INGRAM SAYS

AIR PASSENGER CALLS TRIP SUCCESS

By JOHN C. INGRAM.

Only American Newspaper Man on Board the Graf Zeppelin on Its Return Flight to Germany.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Seven of the sky tourists who flew to Germany two weeks ago Monday aboard the Graf Zeppelin returned to New York City yesterday aboard the Ile de France, all plastered with glory, new hotel labels and enough thrifty information to qualify them as Grade A speakers at a Kiwanis club luncheon.

Included in the party was Clarence Terhune, 19-year-old golf caddy of Rye, who made something of a name for himself by stowing away aboard the Zeppelin at Lakehurst and thereby grabbing for himself a trip which cost most of the dirigible's passengers $4,000 flat. Others of the returning pilgrims who debarked were William Ullman and Joseph Jessel, of a local firm; Paul M. Marko, of Kew Gardens, L. I.; Don M. Caste, of Columbus, O.; Hans Nolde, of Reading, Pa., and this reporter.

PREFER ZEP TO SHIP

The travelers were certain of one thing as they again set foot on Manhattan, and that was that a trans-Atlantic crossing in a Zeppelin is to be preferred to that made on the deluxest of the de luxe ocean liners which now ply between New York City and the old world. While it is still novel and at odd moments a little terrifying, it has its good points. For instance, there is the element of speed. It took us three days to go from Lakehurst to the interior of Germany, and it has taken better than six days for us to get from the coast of France to New York via the liner.

And, as for seasickness—aboard the Zep there was none, but aboard the Ile de France this reporter took the long count soon after the vessel had cleared the breakwater at Havre and promptly went to bed for most of the trip. Next time I go to Europe it'll be via a Zeppelin or not at all.

Zeppelin travel as it exists at the moment has its drawbacks, but even so it ought to mean a big thing for those who will have to travel between the two continents during the next half decade or so. Our own crossing on the Zep was rendered highly uncomfortable by lack of heating apparatus, but when this oversight is remedied, sky travel will have it over steamer travel like a blanket.

Sailing along above the storm-tossed North Atlantic Ocean at a height of 2,000 feet, away from all noise and sense of motion, gives one a peculiar thrill which quite wipes out any trace of fear.

FOG DRIFTS BY

Occasionally there drift by heavy fog banks which obscure your view from the windows. Sometimes you see a steamer wallowing along and, if your course takes you far enough north, you'll likewise probably see an iceberg and a group of floating ice floes. We saw many of these the afternoon our ship was caught in the grip of an 80-mile wind and lashed far north of its course in the direction of Greenland. Despite the hurricane, however, there was little in the way of violent motion and we all went blissfully ahead with our dice-shooting, our drinking and our story-telling. Only once were the passengers made suddenly aware that things were happening which weren't on the program. That was late in the afternoon when the huge balloon suddenly lunged upward at an angle of 45 degrees or better—literally leaped off its even keel and plunged upwards into the clouds as though it was trying to hurdle some gigantic climatic obstacle.

During the fraction of a second in which the Zeppelin remained off keel with its silvery nose tilted high aloft, dishes, glassware, bottles and food were swept from the tables in the dining saloon. By the time the crockery and silverware had struck the floor with a shattering bang, the dirigible was back in hand again and sailing along smoothly. Later they told us that in that one brief fraction of a moment there had been a splendid chance that the ship might "crack up" and go to pieces, just like the ill-fated Shenandoah had done out in Ohio in 1925. Our craft had been caught, it seems, by two vagrant gusts of wind and speedily jerked into an almost upright position.

Our flight on the night of Wednesday, October 30, across France and Switzerland into Friedrichshafen, Germany, on the shores of Lake Constance, was perhaps the most spectacular leg of the entire trip. We had reached the French coast at dusk just as the lighthouses were beginning to flash. We skimmed rapidly over Tours, Nantes, Bourges and Dijon and then began the long haul up over the Alps of the Franco-Swiss frontier.

Dr. Eckener shoved the Zeppelin up some 10,000 feet to pass over the peaks. Nobody slept that night as we were cruising into Friedrichshafen. Finally, early in the day, we soared out over Lake Constance and we knew our three days of glorious skylarking was about at an end.

From the big crowd which was awaiting us on the landing field, we heard some wild cheering—they'd spotted us coming out of the night and heard the drone of our motors. Eckener soared over the landing field again and again, but each time conditions weren't just right for the set down, so off he'd go again. It was nearly two hours later and broad daylight when he finally did ground his big sky cruiser amid the frantic cheering of the wildest mob I've seen since the day Lindy came back to New York.

The Sun-Telegraph Fifteen Cent Pattern

A PLEASING STYLE FOR A PLAY DRESS WITH BLOOMERS.

This model is just right for comfort and service. Full skirt portions are joined to a deep yoke, which forms a point over the center of the front, and extends in short sleeve portions over the top of the arms. To these extensions full sleeve sections may be joined for wrist length sleeves, which are gathered to a narrow band cuff. The bloomers are of the regulation fulness, and may be made of self or contrasting material. The dress may be finished without the bloomers. Cotton prints, gingham, pongee, linen, albatross and voile are excellent materials for this model.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. To make the dress as pictured in the large view for a 4-year size will require 2⅜ yards of 36-inch material. If made with long sleeves 2¾ yards will be required. For facing of contrasting material on collar and cuffs of the long sleeves ¼ yard 27 inches wide is required. To finish with bias binding as illustrated requires four yards.

COUPON.

This pattern will be sent on receipt of 15 cents (silver or 2c and 1c stamps). Make number, name, address, etc., plain. Send to Pattern Department, The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Now! I am right—"

"FORTUNATELY, I found myself in time. I was going down! down! down! I didn't want to eat; there was no desire for it. My muscles were getting flabby—I tired easily. Many a morning I would get up after a sleepless night feeling that I could hardly pull through the day. I was also troubled with those annoying so-called skin troubles. Then, one day a friend urged me to give S.S.S. a trial. Before finishing the first bottle, I could see I was improving. That was only a few weeks ago. Today I feel more like myself than I have in years."

It is a known fact that when one's system gets "run-down," they haven't the resistance to ward off disease. Loss of appetite is only a symptom. General weakness pervades the entire body. There is no desire to work or play.

Your physician will tell you that lowered vitality is the result of an insufficient supply of red blood cells—those vitalizing elements in the blood that nourish and sustain the body.

When you get your red blood cells back up to normal, that sluggish, let-down feeling, loss of appetite, rheumatism, boils, pimples, and skin troubles disappear. You get hungry again; sleep soundly; solid flesh takes the place of that which was once flabby. You feel strong; and your nerves become steady.

For more than 100 years S.S.S. has been helping people regain their strength and charm. Thousands of users have testified to its benefit in unsolicited letters of gratitude.

Made only from the fresh vegetable drugs gathered at the proper season of the year, S.S.S. gives to Nature what she needs in making you yourself again.

All drug stores sell S.S.S. Get the large size. It is more economical.

Without plenty of rich, red blood, there can be no strong, sturdy, powerful men, or beautiful, healthy women.

From Youth to later years S.S.S. is a proven tonic—give it and take it when a tonic is indicated.

SILENT ABOUT SALARIES

3.68 to 3.15 for every 10,000 miles of car operation.

"In 1923 the mileage operated by one-man cars was negligible whereas during 1928, one-man cars operated 26.08 per cent of the total mileage.

"The average speed of one-man cars is faster than the speed attained by two-man cars on the same routes in 1923.

"More one-man cars can be and are operated than could be operated on the same routes with two-man cars," Robertson said.

In answer to the question on street car fares the reply says:

"Our company does contend that it cannot afford to furnish better facilities to the public at the present rate of fare, except as better facilities may be made available by economies and increased efficiency.

NEED ECONOMY

"More economies and increased efficiency would place the company upon a better credit standing which might make new capital more readily available.

"The policy of the Pittsburgh Railways has been to liberalize its fare schedules in an endeavor to attract more car-riders and in order to make the street railway facilities more useful to the entire community."

"If the company was forced to abandon labor-saving devices at present utilized and proved to be successful and feasible, and was forced to adopt uneconomic methods, the policy of fare liberalization would necessarily have to be abandoned."

EXPLAINS RELATIONS

In explaining the relations between the Pittsburgh Railways Company and the Byllesby Engineering and Management Corporation, the reply stated that only one contract is in existence. This provides that for engineering projects too large for the company's regular staff, 7½ per cent of the total cost be paid to the Byllesby organization and for minor work on which only advice is sought, 2 per cent of the cost is paid. Whether or not the Byllesby services are to be used is optional with the Railways Company.

The Byllesby organization received $33,664.37 for it services in the first nine months of this year against $47,603.38 in 1927.

During the nine months ended December 30, 1928, the Pittsburgh Railways Company paid the Duquesne Light Company $1,355,104 for electric power under a 50-year contract dated January 1, 1913.

SAYS RATE NECESSARY

Mr. Robertson reiterated previous statements that the present rate of bus fare is necessary for the type of service rendered and to insure a sound financial development of motor coach operation. He again pointed to the physical layout of the city and the fact that population is less dense here than in other cities.

"The development of motor coach operations on a fare schedule approximating that charged on the street railway facilities could only result in a duplication of facilities, a condition which would react to the detriment of both," the reply stated. "The question the bus fare is completely tied in with the policy of the Pittsburgh Railways Company to furnish the best possible service at the lowest possible fare."

Listerine kills 200,000,000 germs in 15 seconds

Did you realize that Listerine was so powerful?

Hard to believe, isn't it, when you reflect how pleasant and safe Listerine is?

Yet in repeated tests employing the stubborn B. Typhosus (typhoid) germ, used by the Government to test antiseptics, Listerine killed 200 million in 15 seconds!

Now you can understand why millions use Listerine to check ordinary colds and sore throat—both caused by germs.

Keep a bottle handy and use it daily, especially after exposure to germ-laden crowds. It helps you ward off trouble.

Write for our elaborate free book "Personal Hygiene". Address the Lambert Pharmacal Co., Dept. S-14, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

What a funny way to escape a cold

Countless colds start when germs are carried to the mouth on food. By using Listerine on the hands before every meal, you attack such germs and lessen the risk of cold. Remember this, mothers, when handling baby's food

ZAIN PRIZE AD CONTEST ENDS IN FEW HOURS—HURRY!

MORE WOMEN THAN MEN OUT FOR $1,000

Two days—today and tomorrow—remain in which to submit an advertisement that may win the grand prize of $1,000 cash in the $15,000 Zain Ad-Test.

That is ample time, because the advertisement does not have to be a long complicated affair. A single simple idea, expressed in few words, if powerful, catchy, convincing, may capture the prize.

Submit your ideas promptly. Remember, you are not in competition with professional advertisement writers or newspaper employes. They are barred from the test.

To be eligible for the grand prize you must write an ad about each of the 30 local business concerns that are cooperating in the test. In addition to the $1,000 prize, which will be awarded by The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, there will be a number of special prizes, to be given by the cooperating firms.

WOMEN IN MAJORITY

Who will win the grand prize, a woman or a man? Women have been sending in more ads than men lately. Of the six $100 prizes awarded, four were captured by men and two by women. One went to a young man at the Carnegie Institute of Technology and one to a young woman at the University of Pittsburgh. That should stimulate rivalry, one $100 prize went to a housewife, one to a brakeman.

Elsewhere on this page you will find the rules for the test, a list of special prizes, and a list of the 30 firms. Study them.

Visit the stores of these firms and ask questions. They will gladly give you suggestions for your ads. Get acquainted with their products and service.

In writing about Arco Specials bring out that these low-priced stogies give one "all the joy of a good cigar."

Call attention in your ad about C. A. Michel & Co., 640 Smithfield street, dealers in paints, oils and varnishes, to the fact that many old things about the home can be made to look like new with a little paint.

Emphasize the strength of the Union Savings Bank, Fifth Building, "where savings are safe."

Your advertisement of the Harris Amusement Company might well feature the fact that at the Harris theaters "the show is always clean"—and always good.

MANY GOOD SUBJECTS

The beauty of the china and glassware of C. Reizenstein & Sons, 625 Liberty avenue, merits your consideration.

Think in writing your advertisements about the Mausoleum of the satisfaction in having one's loved ones laid to rest in this "Westminster Abbey of Pittsburgh."

The economy of renting a drive-yourself automobile from the Kissel-Skiles Co., and thus saving garage rent and maintenance expense, may well be the theme of your ad about that firm.

Max Azen, the furrier, at 708 Penn avenue, has been in business for over a quarter of a century. That speaks volumes for the reputation of Azen's goods.

Your ad for the General Homes Corporation can be prepared in no better way than by visiting their model home at 2439 Brighton road.

Write each ad on a separate sheet of paper, which should be at least as large as a postal card, and preferably commercial letter size. Put your name and address on the back of each sheet, and also on the flap of the envelope in which you mail them. SEND THE ADS TO THE ZAIN AD-WRITING TEST, CARE OF THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Rules for Sun-Telegraph-Zain $15,000 Ad Test

1—Ads submitted for the grand prize of $1,000 must be received before midnight on November 15, 1928. In order to compete for grand prize, contestants must have submitted at least one ad on each concern listed.

2—One person may submit any number of ads.

3—Write only one ad on one piece of paper. Place name of advertiser at top. Sign YOUR name and address plainly on BACK of each sheet. Also on the flap of each envelope. SEND TO THE ZAIN AD-WRITING TEST, CARE OF THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH, PITTSBURGH, PA.

4—Ads are to become property of advertiser to use in any manner he sees fit. No ads returned. No subscriptions necessary. No blanks to sign. No entrance fee required. No coupons to clip. All professional ad writers and newspaper employes barred.

PRICE CUTTING ASSAILED BY KELLY

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Price cutting of standard articles was opposed by Congressman Clyde Kelly of Pittsburgh in an address before members of the Retail Hardware Association of Philadelphia last night.

The policy of some retailers to offer a standard article of quality at cut prices as "bait," he said, "has worked considerable hardship with the medium-sized and small dealer. The Kelly-Capper bill, which is to come up for a vote in the next session of Congress, provides for authority on the part of the manufacturer of a standard article to maintain a fixed price without violating the anti-trust statutes. Such legislation would permit a manufacturer to protect his name and the public by insuring a quality product. Other manufacturers desiring to sell to cut-price retailers may do so, but the consumer and manufacturer of a trade-marked article would be protected."

Charles T. J. Vea, president of the Dover Manufacturing Company, spoke of the evils resulting from the lust for a quick dollar in merchandising and characterized such action as commercial piracy.

FAIR QUIZZED IN SHOOTING OF STUDENT

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Phillip L. McKee, wealthy manufacturer, yesterday was questioned by police in the belief that he possesses information that will lead to apprehension of gunmen who Sunday morning shot and seriously wounded John C. Acher, Northwestern University football player.

Acher was shot and wounded so seriously that he may die or be crippled for life after his automobile and another car were involved in a collision. His assailants forced him and a younger brother to the curb and shot Acher in the back.

McKee's car, with a fender smashed, and declared by police to have been the one in which Acher's assailants rode, was found near the scene of the accident yesterday and the manufacturer, head of the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Company, was taken into custody.

McKee, who had reported the car stolen, and D. T. Church, real estate man, who was with him Saturday night, told of visiting several night clubs and said they had several drinks but maintained they were in a cabaret at the time of the shooting and came out later to find McKee's car gone.

Girl entertainers in the cabaret, who also were questioned by the police, corroborated the part of McKee's story dealing with a visit to the night club. McKee, however, told several versions of the places he had visited and some of his statements were disputed by Church.

News From Photoplay Capital Combined With Notes About Local Theaters

OLD STAGE MELODRAMA NEXT SCREEN PRODUCTION FOR RICHARD DIX

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 14.

WHEN Richard Dix returns to the Paramount Long Island studios from Hollywood, it will be to remain in New York during the filming of three photoplays. One of these is to be a screen version of the good old melodrama, "Bulldog Drummond," a thriller containing plenty of movie material in both words and action. Of course the picture will be an audible. They are all these days.

"Drummond" is the vehicle which was once spoken for by Samuel Goldwyn, who thought of putting Ronald Colman in the title role. The tough and ready hero of the story is vastly different from any character Ronald has portrayed. Apparently this idea has been abandoned. It would surely seem as though Richard were better suited to the role.

There is some talk of selecting a leading woman and a supporting cast from Broadway's stage actors. But Dix, himself, has started a preference for a girl of the films as his heroine. Don't be surprised, therefore, to see Mary Astor cast as his leading woman. Several producers seem to feel that the stage "Mellers" contain great picture material, and the advent of "Bulldog Drummond" as a picture may be the forerunner of a host of similar plays translated into terms of the movies.

Dix's latest film, "Redskin," was previewed recently. Again Richard proves himself the ideal Indian of the movies. The picture was made in the Navajo country, and there are some beautiful sequences shot in colors. The story, by Elizabeth Pickett, concerns a son of the Navajos who attends the white man's college and as a result is cast out both by his own people and the palefaces.

Lois Wilson in Film Playlets

LOIS WILSON and Edward Everett Horton are making two screen playlets for the Christies before Christmas. Both have been loaned to Al and Charlie by the Warner Brothers. Incidentally, Eddie Horton seems about to realize his life's ambition. About January 1 ground will be broken for the new Horton Theater.

"Shady Lady," just completed by Director E. H. Griffith, is the last picture Phyllis Haver will make for Pathe. She is to go over to the Metro lot and will work under Cecil B. De Mille in whatever picture he makes following "Dynamite." Phyllis has already called at the studios to receive a sort of advance welcome from Louis B. Mayer, shepherd of the Metro lion cubs. Phyllis and Russell Gleason are great pals. They met while working in "Shady Lady," which is Russell's first picture. Incidentally, they say that the son of Jimmy Gleason and Lucille Webster steals the show.

Barbara Kent For "Broadway"

PRESIDENT CARL LAEMMLE of Universal, is on his way East to talk with Flo Ziegfeld about "Show Boat." "Uncle Carl" would like to have the music of the play synchronized to the picture. But Mr. Ziegfeld has the say so about this. If the "Show Boat" score cannot be obtained there will, at least, be sound effects and Negro spirituals to justify the "see and hear" line with which sound films are advertised.

By the way, the name of Barbara Kent is most frequently mentioned in connection with the leading feminine role in Universal's screen version of "Broadway." Her selection for the part would, at least, be in line with Universal's policy of giving the big breaks to people on their own lot. Director Feios and Carl Laemmle, Jr., will have to make up their minds soon, for the film goes into production this month.

Items from the Paramount studios, still called the "Lasky Lot," include the signing of a new contract by William Powell, the existing of Fred Kohler in "The Dummy," and the completion of the fifty-second photoplay, Bebe Daniels has made for the organization. Bebe signed way back in 1918, when she was Harold Lloyd's leading woman. If memory serves, her first for Paramount was "Male and Female," which starred Gloria Swanson and Tom Meighan.

Ruth Elder in Westerns Now

IT IS pretty well established that Ruth Elder faces a lot of jealousy and disappointments in Hollywood. Up to now she hasn't had any the best of it. After her one picture with Paramount, opposite Richard Dix in "Moran of the Marines," they severed connections, and now Ruth has signed up with Hoot Gibson. Meantime, however, Ruth has established herself in Hollywood's heart and is becoming more and more popular. If her courage lasts she'll be on top yet.

Emmett Flynn is back in the spotlight with a megaphone through which he will direct a screen version of Jaime Del Rio's play, "From Hell Came a Lady," presented locally last season. It seems logical enough that Mae Busch, Lionel Belmore and the rest of the picture people who appeared in the stage play will act their respective roles in the film.

Gus Edwards has written a song titled "Lon Chaney'll Get Yer If Yer Don't Watch Out." It should be synchronized with shots showing Lon in his various grotesque make-ups.

PA. GAVE G. O. P. $750,000

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 13.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania's contribution to the campaign fund of the Republican National Committee was in excess of $750,000.

Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman and state treasurer-elect, in speaking yesterday before the annual meeting here of the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women, said "conservatively, our contribution to the National Committee was $750,000. And that's a low figure." He spoke commendingly of the efforts of the women in the state in the recent campaign and said they were in a large part responsible for the huge majority Herbert Hoover received in Pennsylvania. Pleading for support of the President-elect when he takes office, he continued, "we as a state must follow along with Hoover and his policies, just as we did in the campaign."

CAMERAMAN PICTURES :-: FILM PLAYERS :-: IN INFORMAL POSES

Gaven Lee, Johnny Mack Brown, Edward Nugent and Raquel Torres, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer players, are caught in the act of playing a Monte Carlo game to which Hollywood has given the name, "Horses."

Anita Page carries her face repair kit in a "vanity gun," which looks like an automatic and might bluff a masher.

Gladys Belmont, leading woman for Richard Dix in "Redskin," being filmed in natural color, took the part of Cornflower from 433 others who took screen tests. She is seventeen.

DRY LAW LOSES IN MONTANA

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—An initiated proposal to adopt the Federal prohibition laws as the liquor code of Montana was defeated by voters of that state a week ago, final tabulations show. With the vote from 37 scattered and sparsely settled precincts missing, the proposal was running behind by 7,443 votes. The totals to date, including returns from each county in the state stood:

For the proposal 65,85; against 73,28.

Montana has no state laws adopted in conformity with the Federal prohibition code.

306-Lb. Buck Killed In Preston Co., W. Va.

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 14.—Twenty-three deer were legally killed in Preston county during the 10-day season which closed November 10. Last year 20 were killed. Edward Dinkenberger, Kingwood, killed the largest deer in Preston county—a 10-point buck weighing 306 pounds.

Mengelberg Here Friday, Saturday

William Mengelberg, Dutch conductor, will return with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra of 100 players, for the second pair of concerts in the Pittsburgh Orchestra Association series in Syria Mosque Friday night and Saturday afternoon. The major work Friday night will be the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony." The symphony for the Saturday matinee will be Schubert's Symphony in C Major.

Andalusian Cities In Holmes' Lecture

"Andalusia and the Alhambra" is the subject of the travel lecture to be presented by Burton Holmes in Carnegie Music Hall tonight. Among the cities of Andalusia to be visited by the Holmes' "tourists" will be Seville, Cadiz, Cordova, Jerez, Palos, La Rabida, Ronda and Granada.

Doris Niles' Ballet Here Thanksgiving

Doris Niles and her ballet will appear in Syria Mosque on Thanksgiving night. The company will include an orchestra comprising a number of the solo players of the New York Symphony Orchestra, who played here last season under Walter Damrosch.

SHOW BILLS OF NEXT WEEK

It is said that Katharine Cornell has a most exacting role in "The Age of Innocence," which will open a week's engagement in the Pitt next Monday evening. The story deals with New York society in the early seventies. It shows the virtues of the society of that age as well as its limitations. Arnold Korff and Rollo Peters head the cast.

"Hit the Deck," musical comedy success, with Queenie Smith and Charles Purcell, returns to the Nixon next week, opening Monday night, November 19, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. "Hit the Deck" played one year on Broadway.

"Golden Dawn," Arthur Hammerstein's operetta production, is returning to the Alvin next week. Among the principals in the cast are Paul Gregory, Bonnie Emerie, Robert Chisholm, Nellie Breen, Gil Squires, Paula Ayres and Jacques Cartier. There also is an ensemble of 100 and an orchestra of 35 pieces.

"Cheaters' Inn," with a cast of seven, featuring Jimmy Allard, will headline the Keith-Albee vaudeville in the Davis next week. On the screen will be "Foreign Legion," with Lewis S. Stone, Norman Kerry and June Marlowe.

In "Lilac Time," coming next week to the Gayety stage Mary Ann Dentler will play the part of the French maiden portrayed originally by Jane Cowl. As an English lieutenant, Robert Lowes will be seen in the grandeur of uniform.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications.

READY INSTANTLY!

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

OILS were being spread on turbulent waters last night by Pittsburgh station managers in an effort to minimize the volume of criticism that has arisen over the wavelength changes. They offered two suggestions. The first was "Be patient for two weeks." The second was "Bring your set up to date."

It is a scientific fact that heterodyning, commonly called "whistling," will continue for three or four more days until the stations bind themselves to the new wavelength assignments. Very few stations are holding their frequency assignment and this is the cause of much of the trouble, it was said.

In some places new equipment must be installed. Other places are using makeshift frequency meters due to a last minute rush on the only manufacturers in the country to supply these meters. The new meters cannot be turned out fast enough, it was said. The home constructed meters are not accurate.

While the kettle boils there comes tonight another experiment. Station WJAS will attempt to use its full power of 1,000 watts. This should not interfere with Pittsburgh reception. The object of increased power is to cover distance. Anything might happen under this new arrangement of stations. It will be well to tune in.

A very good friend reminded us that it took almost a month for listeners to grow accustomed to the last wavelength changes, but complaints soon died down when the stations were properly located on the dials. "Will this not be the case again?" they asked.

We distinctly recall the last shake-up. There was much confusion.

TURNED OUT WELL

Strangely enough, it centered around WCAE. But things came around all right. WCAE had been operating on 62 meters. They were cut to 461.3 meters.

Only that was a horse of a different color. Being cut 31 meters in a favorable broadcast band is nothing like being chopped down 215.5 meters over night. And to make matters worse, only 13 meters away from a station in the same city.

At WCAE they refuse to get excited. Things are calm too at KDKA, WJAS and KQV. But radio fans are on the bandwagon. Out of a big batch of letters received last night only five commented favorably on the reallocation plan.

True, we must bear with the Radio Commission in this time of real tribulation but if we have any complaints to register we will register them now or forever hold our peace.

Let it be understood that the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph is not criticizing the Radio Commission but merely presenting the unbiased opinions of radio listeners. The columns of this newspaper have been thrown open for the radio listener to express his opinion that the Federal Radio Commission might be guided in its future actions. Since the day of its organization the commission has relied almost entirely on newspapers for faithful reports of conditions existing in different cities throughout the nation.

Coolidge Writes To Boy Who Lost 6 Kin in Fire

LYNN, Mass., Nov. 14.—(A.P.)—Harry Blaney, 17, whose mother, four sisters and one brother lost their lives in a factory explosion and fire, which caused 18 deaths last Thursday, today received a letter of condolence from President Coolidge. The letter expressed the hope that the youth might find some consolation to relieve his heavy burden of sorrow.

During the President's stay at Swampscott in the summer of 1925, Harry made a bust of him out of soap and presented it to the President.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 14.—Eph Wirick, alderman, and Ambrose Berkebile, constable, of the Seventeenth Ward, were given jail sentences when arraigned before the Cambria County Court at Ebensburg as the result of their conviction of extortion. Wirick was given from four months to one year in the county jail, while Berkebile was given from nine months to one year. Their arrest and conviction grew out of the illegal collection of fees in liquor and gambling cases in the city.

EARHART VISITS HERE FRIDAY

Miss Amelia Earhart, famous trans-Atlantic aviatrix, has decided to return to Pittsburgh for an all-day visit Friday. This will be her third visit here.

On her first visit to Pittsburgh Miss Earhart was in the city less than two hours, when she was accorded a public reception and given the key to the city. The second visit was when she "cracked up" in her plane at Rodgers Field.

This time Miss Earhart will spend the entire day in the city. She will be accompanied by George Palmer Putnam, explorer, and publisher of her book on her flying experience. The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce has invited her and Putnam to a special noon luncheon in its dining room, and Miss Earhart will also attend the conference for the Cure and Cause of War, being held under auspices of Congress of Women's Clubs at Carnegie Music Hall Friday.

The reception committee to meet Miss Earhart consists of Norman Aldershoe, Col. Harry C. Fry, Jr., A. T. Bonson, Edward Thomson, W. R. Palmer, Walter Chambers, Mrs. Laura Holland Macdonald, Miss Lydia Cypher, J. J. Esterbrook, Mrs. Donald Harrison.

PUBLIC AGAIN WILL PICK MOST POPULAR PAINTING

Carnegie Institute will offer a prize of $200 for the most popular painting in the Twenty-seventh International Exhibition.

The award of this prize will be determined by the vote of visitors to the exhibition from November 18 to December 2, inclusive. Each visitor during that period will be given a ballot on which to vote for his favorite painting in the International hall. The award will be made to the artist whose painting receives the greatest number of votes.

The purpose of the prize is to stimulate interest in the exhibition, to encourage visitors to study the paintings and to express their opinion after their own standards of criticism.

This is the fifth time that such an award has been given at the annual International exhibition. For two years Malcolm Parcell was the winner. In the twenty-fifth International Leopold Seyffert won the prize with his painting, "Rose and Silver," and last year the prize went to Carl Melchers for his painting, "The Hunters."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Two Pittsburgh Society Girls Make Plans to Wed in January

TIME was when a fashionable wedding was always associated with June, but now the word wedding may call to one's mind the month of April or January or really almost any time at all, excepting August. And one is not quite safe in this exception either, for in August weddings among society folks sometimes take place at summer homes.

January does not rival spring or June in the number of weddings but does demand recognition as a special month for marriages, since of late years quite a few important ceremonies have been performed on its days.

This January will be marked by two exceptionally interesting weddings, the dates for which I've just heard.

Marjorie Babcock, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred R. Babcock, who made her debut last year, has named as January date—the third of the month—for her marriage to James McKay, son of the J. Albert McKays, of "Oakhill," Amberson avenue. Their engagement was announced last month by Marjorie's brother and his wife, the Raymond Babcocks, of Shady avenue.

The ceremony will be performed that afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, and will be followed by a small reception in the Raymond Babcock home.

NO doubt you have been wondering who the other January bride will be. She's Augusta Leovy, daughter of the Frank Adair Leovys, of Beechwood boulevard, whose engagement to Clarence Stanley, son of Mrs. William Stanley, of Great Barrington, Mass., was announced just last week. Augusta has selected a date a few days later—January 9—for her wedding, which will take place in Calvary Episcopal Church. A reception in the Pittsburgh Golf Club will follow the service, I understand.

Augusta is a society girl with varied interests. Besides being seen at all social affairs, she is fond of sports, particularly golf, and is interested in the philanthropies sponsored by the younger set. She is president, as you probably know, of the Junior League here.

A LOVELY party of yesterday was the tea which Mrs. Allen W. McEldowney and her daughters, Mrs. Howard K. Walter and Jane McEldowney, gave in the Twentieth Century club for the new Mrs. William McConway McEldowney, who was Hazelhurst Plant McCaw, of New York, before her recent wedding.

The ballroom of the club was used for the reception, and it was decorated with huge baskets of fall flowers grouped with viburnum ferris and palms. The tea tables were placed in the dining and tea rooms, and on them were baskets of the autumn blooms. In one room the predominating color was yellow, while orchid was used in the other. The hostess received with her daughters and her newly-married daughter-in-law. The senior Mrs. McEldowney was gowned in green satin and crepe with a green velvet hat, while the guest of honor wore blue lace.

UNDER the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of the Pittsburgh Hospital, the annual tea-dance will be held December 27 in the Hotel Schenley, from 4 to 7 o'clock. Miss Mary Hackett, president, will be assisted by the board members.

* * *

A MARRIAGE of interest here, which was solemnized in the East, has just been made known. It is that of Eleanor McClintock, daughter of the Norman McClintocks, of Amberson avenue, and Walter A. Heacock, son of the James S. Heacocks, of Burley, Idaho, which took place recently in New York. The young Heacocks are sailing this week to make an indefinitely long visit in South America.

* * *

STILL another party has been added to the list of affairs given for Louise Reed. This debutante will be guest of honor at a dinner dance which Mr. and Mrs. Allison Maxwell will give in their Bennington avenue home on December 11. Louise is a niece of the Maxwells, you may remember.

* * *

THE marriage of Miss Ruth Rodgers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Rodgers, of Riverview avenue, Bellevue, and Edward McCrady, Jr., son of Mrs. Edward McCrady, of Edgewood, will be solemnized the night of December 1 at 7:30 o'clock in the Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church by the Rev. Dr. R. B. Umy, assisted by the Rev. J. B. Magee. Miss Margaret Rodgers will be her cousin's maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be Miss Elizabeth and Miss Rebecca McCrady, sisters of the bridegroom; Miss Virginia Hamilton, Miss Elizabeth Barr and Miss Carolyn Howell, of Dallas, Tex. Barbara Rodgers, sister of the bride, will be flower girl. John McCrady will be his brother's best man and the ushers will include J. Norwood Rodgers, William Horner, Kenneth C. Milliken, C. J. Conrad, Harry Mathews and J. Lawrence Buchanan, of Greensburg.

* * *

MRS. ROBERT JONES, of Abraham street, McKeesport, announces the marriage of her sister, Miss Martha L. White, of McKeesport, to Russell P. Hale, son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Hale, of Monongahela avenue, Glassport, which took place Monday in the parsonage of the Pilgrim Holiness Church of McKeesport with the Rev. W. H. Joppie, the pastor, officiating. A breakfast in the home of the bride's sister followed. After an eastern wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Hale will reside in Glassport.

Sarah Sloan Club Holds Reception

THE Sarah Sloan Scholarship Club, the only club in the state and probably in the country, which devotes itself solely to scholarship work, closed its charter yesterday with 100 charter members. The charter was closed at the brilliant reception which the club gave in the home of Mrs. Walter R. Fleming, Pioneer avenue, in honor of its life president, Mrs. John S. Sloan. Mrs. Sloan, in black velvet, and Mrs. Fleming, in brown, received together and the aides were the board members. The tea table was beautiful in its lovely appointments and big center basket of yellow chrysanthemums tied with yellow satin ribbon. During the hours, from two until five o'clock, Mrs. S. J. Corbett, Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, Mrs. David I. McCahill, Mrs. George J. Campbell, Mrs. Joseph B. Drake and Mrs. Charles S. Hutchinson alternated as pourers. There was a program of unusual artistry, Mrs. C. A. Brooks, program chairman, presenting Mrs. Lucille Miller Werner, soprano, and Miss Mabel King,

Weather Conditions.

There are three unusually well defined pressure units on the map this morning. A high over the Atlantic Coast states, a marked low over the Plains states and another low over the Pacific coast, separated from the Plains states low by a ridge of relatively high pressure over the Rocky Mountains.

The Atlantic coast high increased considerably in pressure since yesterday, when it covered the Ohio Valley states. The highest pressure is 30.58 inches, at Raleigh. It is attended by clear skies and it caused a marked drop in temperature over Western and Central Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The Plains states low is centered over South Dakota and Nebraska, lowest barometer, 29.22 inches, at Valentine, Neb. It is causing cloudy weather from the Rocky Mountains to the Ohio Valley states and rain over most of the Plains states. It also caused a marked rise in temperature over the Central valleys and the plains.

River Conditions.

There was a slight rise in the upper rivers. Stage at Pittsburgh is 10.8 feet. Dam No. 2, 8.7, and Dam No. 6, 7.8. The dams are up.

WILLIAM A. WYMAN, newly-elected burgess of Thornburg, was asked to give Sidewalks an exclusive interview upon his new position. "Naturally," he said, "I stand for a bigger and better Thornburg—and say, would you mind mentioning the Harris and the Sheridan Square Theaters."

Inquiry developed that Mr. Wyman is the publicity man for these two theaters. "My platform is simple. I stand for prosperity, the safeguarding of the American home, and good weather. In closing, I might say that I haven't seen much better shows than the Harris and Sheridan Square are giving these days."

THE business of street-carring is becoming more complex with the advance of civilization. Conductors have developed a great knack for carrying more articles than even the most ambitious housewife thinks up for her one-time boy friend to bring home from market.

Near any carbarn you may see a conductor going off or on duty carrying a pillow, a coin container, a sort of apron, a report card, a dinner bucket, a pipe, a newspaper, and one conductor in Wilkinsburg, at the moment of going to press, was reported as carrying his own personal cuspidor.

Charles R. Ferlin, a local boy in the newspaper game, is on the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, having just returned from a 16 months' stay in Paris. Mr. Ferlin went with one of Father Cox's tours, but instead of returning with the pilgrimage, he remained in Paris where he improved the American letters through service on the Paris edition of the New York Herald.

Mr. Ferlin lived in Montparnasse. He paid the equivalent of $25 a month for a three-room apartment. A meal, with wine, ran not much more than 40 cents.

He said it is not particularly difficult to get a newspaper job in Paris.

He had only one unpleasant experience in Paris. A waiter tried to overcharge him for a quart of wine. The villainous Garcon wanted something like a nickel when the real charge was four cents.

I am 69 years of age, married, without children, and it is my wish that my name and title shall not die out, but be continued after me. IN COURTS FOR 21 YEARS, ARCHITECT SETTLES CASE

Having been in litigation in the courts for 22 years, the claim of F. J. Osterling, architect, for commission for church plans furnished the Third United Presbyterian Church more than 25 years ago, has been settled.

The record was cleared yesterday when a check for $870 from the church board was paid over to Attorney Joseph F. Mayhew, representing Osterling, the amount recently awarded Osterling by a jury, plus the costs of the proceedings. The jury's award was for $751. Osterling claimed commission for plans for a $150,000 church but which were finally rejected, although he had prepared them in accordance with the instructions of the church board.

The case has been tried twice. Recently Osterling asked for a new trial, but acceptance of the check ends the litigation.

JUDGE ROWAND

Judge Harry H. Rowand, who began his term on the Common Pleas Court bench in 1924, has long been in public life. Born in Verona in 1871, he graduated from Washington Jefferson College in 1892. He was appointed assistant district attorney in 1907, reappointed for a full term and in 1917 was elected district attorney, re-elected in 1921 and served until December 15, 1922, when he was appointed judge by Gov. Sproul. He served as a first lieutenant during the Spanish-American War. He lives in Oakmont.

GRAND OFFICERS WILL ATTEND ELKS' FETE

Past Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia; J. Edgar Masters, of Chicago; John G. Price, of Columbus, former Attorney General of Ohio, and John K. Tener, past grand exalted ruler of the Elks, former Governor of Pennsylvania and former president of the National Baseball League, will be present in Braddock next Sunday, November 18, to take part in the exercises incident to the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Braddock Lodge of Elks.

The celebration will be a two-day affair, starting with an initiation ceremony Sunday evening, when 82 candidates will be initiated. On Monday the Elks will hold open house all day, and at 6:30 o'clock will hold a banquet in the K. of C. Hall, Braddock.

The lodge was instituted November 19, 1903, in Old Turner Hall, with a membership of 81. During its 25 years of existance it has increased its membership to 1,200 and has dispensed in charity approximately $100,000. It is housed in a temple valued at $125,000.

ASK ZONE LAW CHANGES

Changes in the zoning classification of property bounded by Saline, Lilac and Ludwick streets and the Vineland plan of lots is authorized in an ordinance introduced in Council yesterday.

The measure would change the site from a "B" to an "A" residential district, from a 35-foot height to a 100-foot height district and from a first area to a second area district.

Aged Man, Hit by Auto, Near Death

William Switzer, 74, familiar figure about the streets of Homestead, was probably fatally injured yesterday in Homestead when run down by an automobile driven by Albert Spiers, of 1110 Eleventh avenue, Munhall. Switzer sustained a broken right leg and a probable fracture of the skull. He is in Homestead Hospital.

Wed 41 Years, Wife Asks Divorce

After 41 years of wedded life, 21 years of which she has been separated from her husband, Katherine Lintelman, Perchment street, Wilkinsburg, appeared before Judge Thomas J. Ford, of Common Pleas Court, to ask a divorce from John Lintelman, to whom she was married in 1887.

Mrs. Lintelman told the court that one cold night in 1903 her husband put her and her five children out of the house in the snow, because he was under the influence of liquor. After that episode they separated for good. Mrs. Lintelman testified that in 1891 she left her husband, but went to live with him again. After the fifth child was born she said her husband brought home a bottle of wine, was intoxicated and wanted her to drink with him, and when she refused pitched the wine into the grate. The attending physician, she said, had him arrested.

TWO HOMES DAMAGED BY FIRE

Two Squirrel Hill homes were damaged by fire that originated in the cellar of each residence.

Damage estimated at $500 was caused when flames of an undetermined origin swept through a cellar of a two-story brick house at 504 Lloyd street, George A. Dunn, owner of the building, occupies the second floor and P. Seybold the lower.

Several hours later the home of E. C. McQuiston, at 6315 Bartlett street, was damaged when a blaze was discovered in the basement. The fire was confined to that part by firemen, who were unable to learn its cause. The loss amounted to $50, firemen say.

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE IDENTIFIED

The body of a woman who was fatally injured by an automobile at Broad street and Sheridan avenue was identified as that of Susan Knox, 73, of 228 Sheridan avenue, by her husband, Simpson Knox, at the county morgue last night. She was struck by a machine driven, police say, by Thomas Barthlow, 50, of 7313 Race street, who was arrested. The accident occurred late Monday night and the woman died early yesterday in the Pittsburgh Hospital.

MAKE MOVE TO EXTEND BOULEVARD OF ALLIES

A resolution authorizing the Department of Public Works to present legislation for further improvements to the Boulevard of the Allies was introduced in Council yesterday on motion of President James F. Malone.

The proposal is to cut off 20 feet at the southeasterly curb which extends into the section of the boulevard that formerly was Emily street, between Craft avenue and Halket street. The improvement would make the width of that section conform with the width of the boulevard west of Craft avenue.

It is understood that a balance of $300,000 remains of the original boulevard fund and it is expected that the money will be ample to finance the proposed widening.

Negley Ave. Zone Change Requested

An ordinance amending the zoning law by changing the classification of property on North Negley avenue between the present commercial district north of Penn avenue and the property of H. J. Beck was presented yesterday to council.

The bill would change the classification from a "B" to an "A" residential district, from a 35 foot height to a 100 foot height district and from a first area to a second area district.

BUS LINE TO EAST END ASKED

The Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company yesterday asked permission of City Council and the State Public Service Commission to extend bus service to the Greenfield avenue district.

Approval of council was asked in a letter forwarded by John E. Born, building promoter. While councilmen were discussing Born's letter the company made application to the commission in Harrisburg.

Born said the bus line would be operated on Forward avenue and Beechwood boulevard to serve the territory between Greenfield avenue bridge and Monitor street. He said the proposed service would increase housing facilities in that district.

Born said the city, through the Department of Public Works, has withheld support of the bus lines because part of the route would pass through Schenley Park. He stated however that he understood a number of councilmen were in favor of allowing buses to use the park driveways.

The application filed with the commission asks for the privilege to operate buses from Fifth and Liberty avenues to the intersection of Beechwood boulevard and Phillips avenue and Beechwood boulevard and Monitor street. A hearing will be held here December 4.

RUSH STREETS AT WILKINSBURG

The concrete on the last block of Ross avenue, Wilkinsburg, will be poured tomorrow and it is expected the street will be open to traffic December 1. Workmen will start tomorrow to lift the wood blocks with which Penwood avenue is paved below the railroad and the paving will be replaced with brick. The wood block paving, having proved unsatisfactory by reason of its slippery condition when wet, is being replaced with brick wherever possible.

SCHOOL PUPILS HEAR BAND

The Wilkinsburg schools, grade and high, were granted a half holiday Tuesday to enable the pupils to hear the United States Marine Band at two concerts in the Rowland Theater. The band brought to Wilkinsburg under the auspices of the John M. Clarke Post of the American Legion arrived in Wilkinsburg yesterday morning and was escorted to its hotel by the high school bands. Later Capt. Branson, leader of the Marine Band, directed the high school band in two numbers in the high school auditorium. The concerts of the band in the afternoon were arranged especially for the school pupils.

Jailed for 60 Days, Seeks Habeas Writ

Alleging that he was illegally sentenced, Emmait Welsh, arrested October 25 last at 1311 Epiphany street on a suspicious person charge and sent to the workhouse for 60 days by Magistrate John W. Orie, has brought habeas corpus proceedings in Common Pleas Court to obtain his freedom. Welsh, who had been drinking, says he was sentenced for 60 days in default of a $50 fine.

Hold Motorist for Court Under Bond

John C. Rogers, 1419 Electric avenue, North Braddock, was held in $500 bond for court by Justice of the Peace William Wilkinson, of Turtle Creek. Police of that borough allege Rogers crashed into a parked car and passed a red signal light while under the influence of liquor.

MARINE BAND LEADER URGES SCHOOL UNITS

Capt. Taylor Branson, leader of the United States Marine Band, was the guest of the Rotary Club of Wilkinsburg at its weekly luncheon yesterday at the Penn-Lincoln Hotel. The band played three concerts in Wilkinsburg Tuesday.

The bandmaster addressed the Kiwanians on high school bands. In the course of his remarks Capt. Branson told his hearers that nothing stimulated interest as a school band and that the business men of any community would do well to give their support to these organizations. The western part of the country is far more advanced in their school bands than the eastern section, the captain remarks, and advocated the club to encourage the school musical organizations.

He praised the local high school band. The Rev. Dr. O. H. Sisson, of the Baptist church, also addressed the club on the patriotic meaning of Armistice Day.

Will Rogers Says

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 14.

We got one of the most stubborn murder cases here in New York. It seems the fellow that shot Arnold Rothstein is just bullheaded and won't come in and give up.

There was some little talk of even going so far as to arrest him but that's been squashed.

Been reading editorials on President Coolidge debt and armament speech. Several papers have asked: "What would Europe do if we were in difficulties and needed help?"

So this is in reply to those inquiries: Europe would hold a celebration.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

BUGS BAER Says

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

IT BEGINS to look as if New York State will have too many governors —or not enough— this season.

The election on the first Tuesday after the first open night in November resulted in somebody being elected. But nobody knows who it is.

Franklin Roosevelt claims that he is Governor and that Ottinger exhausts the quota.

Ottinger insists that he is elected by a scrambled majority and wants to know who threw the mice in the ballot box.

When asked to concede the official scenario, Ottinger said there was nothing to concede. He insists that they check up the vote again.

After they tabulate the statistics, then Roosevelt will step forth and say "Now we will counted it your way. Noww we will count it my way."

They will keep this up until exhausted. When Ottinger is doing the addition, the Republicans will be triumphant.

When Roosevelt starts steering the madding machine it will be a glorious victory for the Democrats.

We don't mind how many times they check up the vote. What worries us is that they may get so enthusiastic that they will insist on running the campaign all over again and force us to listen to their speeches for the second time.

Of course, they could compromise. Roosevelt could wear the high hat and Ottinger might collect the salary.

So far as we are concerned the election is over. As Al Smith said in his valedictory lament:

"It behooves me—"

It was the kid's last crack. There was no doubt that Al was behooved.

In the meantime, Ottinger refuses to take off his Sunday clothes. He intends to go to Albany and park himself in the high chair.

Roosevelt seems to have a majority of 25,000 Democratic votes. Ottinger claims he can offset that with three healthy Republicans and one election judge.

Try Magnesia For Indigestion

Says Bisurated Magnesia Must Make Stomach Feel Fine in Five Minutes or Money Back

People who suffer from indigestion usually have tried pepsin, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and got little more than slight temporary relief—sometimes not even that.

But before giving up to Chronic dyspepsia, just try the effect of a little Bisurated Magnesia—not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate or milk, but pure Bisurated Magnesia, which you can obtain from May Drug Co., or any reliable druggist in either powder or tablet form on the positive guarantee that it must give complete satisfaction or its small cost will be returned to you.

Take a teaspoonful of the powder or four tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach which now causes your food to ferment, and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn and the bloated or heavy, lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat. You can enjoy your meals without a fear of indigestion.

Our Daily Short Story

ESTHER

By GUY SWARINGEN

MR. CHARLES BICKETT, of Bickett & Burke, strolled back to the little railed-off office for his overcoat. It was seven in the evening, and dark. There was no one in the village store but its two owners.

"Ready to go, Ad?" he asked his partner, a smaller, paler man, who was hunched over the desk. Mr. Bickett himself was tall and symmetrical. His figure well served his belief that good dressing is good advertising. He rather specialized in the clothing department, leaving the groceries and notions to Addison Burke and their clerk, Esther Riggs.

"Why, no." Addison's mild blue eyes had a slight prominence which lent them a look of perpetual surprise. "You know we planned to begin taking stock tonight."

"I'd forgotten." Mr. Bickett laughed ruefully. "Well, I can't break my date. You can get along just as well without me, anyway."

Addison Burke voiced no objection. It was true that he could do as well by himself. Charles was a magnetic salesman, but his was a free and active spirit that chafed under the more tedious tasks of the store. Addison followed him with a look of devotion. He was continually surprised at the kindness of Mr. Bickett, who had given him a job, encouraged him to save his money, and finally sold him a partnership.

He did not know that this was equally puzzling to others who had known Bickett longer. Addison caught little of the gossip that sometims drifted into the store. His mind was too full of business—and of Esther Riggs.

Addison could close his eyes now and see in imagination the creamy oval of her face with its tawny eyes and hair, the full curves of her form. He often wondered why she was still unmarried.

With a handful of order slips, he went over to stare at the shelves of shoe boxes. A lonely man, he sometimes talked to himself.

"Shoes gone," he mumbled, "and no money to show for them!"

"Doesn't seem possible!" Addison drew out a handkerchief and wiped a face that had grown paler. With a haste that savored of desperation he pursued his figuring and searching.

"Well——" He shook his head unhappily. "Guess I'll have to go ask her!"

A direct and simple man was Addison. It did not occur to him that a clerk who would steal would also lie! At the moment he was sure he would rather face a den of lions than Esther Riggs; but his duty seemed plain.

It was chilly outdoors, but he did not think of coat or hat.

Before Esther Riggs' home he hesitated a moment. He had often wished vaguely that he might call on her, evenings, but had not ventured to try. His only visits to the house had been business calls, when he sometimes delivered groceries at the back door.

After a moment or two he knocked. Esther came to the door herself.

"Why, Addison!" Her tone of surprise was underlaid with some warmer note of pleasure. "Come in! Aren't you cold?"

Addison followed her into the old-fashioned parlor. Even in his preoccupation, he felt his usual pleasure in being near her.

"Charles!" he exclaimed, halting in the door. He had never speculated as to where his partner's evenings were spent. The sight of Bickett seated before the fire came to him as a surprise. This surprise unseated Addison's small remaining store of calm, so that he blurted: "Charles, there's something wrong at the store! All the money isn't going into the cash register! I've found——"

He faltered, appalled at what he himself was saying. Bickett was watching him with a curious intensity. It was some seconds before Addison realized that Esther was staring just as fixedly at Charles. Addison groped for the meaning of her look; finally realized that Bickett was rising. The senior partner's smile was a little grim.

"I thought so!" Addison started as he realized that it was Esther who spoke. "But it wasn't my place to come between partners!"

"Eh?" Charles Bickett's head lifted with a hard pride. "The store's mine. I sold him an interest out of kindness."

Addison dazedly grappled with a realization that the man was trying to explain, to set himself right in Esther's eyes.

"He paid for his share. The business is partly his now," said Esther quietly. "You'll never make it appear anything but stealing."

Addison could not believe what he was hearing.

"Esther!" Bickett took a step forward. "You won't tell this—"

The contempt on Esther's face silenced him, even before she answered: "If you don't want the whole town to know—sell out to Addison and me, and go away."

"I won't be blackmailed—" But the spasm of fury died, leaving Bickett pale. "All right!" he said. "All right!"

He moved away, forlornly; hesitated at the door, and went on. At last they heard the outside door close after him.

"Sit down, Addison," said Esther; and sat down herself.

"Esther—" Addison was staring at her, trembling. His mind was a jumble of surprise—grief—joy. Joy, because what he had thought of her was not true. Grief and shame for having thought it. Horror over what he had learned about his partner. "Esther—forgive me—I thought it was you!" He sank to his knees beside her.

"That's all right." Esther reached and smoothed his hair; suddenly drew his head against her shoulder. "Now don't you worry any more. We'll buy the store and have it to ourselves. And we'll—"

She paused, waiting for him to add the obvious. But Addison was too humble and ashamed.

So she added softly: "And we'll have each other—dear!"

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Mental Depression Often Due to Ills

"TO keep your mind well, watch your health." This is the sensible advice of a famous expert in mental diseases. Let me quote a bit more from this great doctor: "As far as we know, the brain is the organ of the mind. The brain is nourished by the same blood that feeds the other parts of the body. The brain is subject to diseases the same as any other organ.

DR. COPELAND

"Each organ has its own way of showing that it is sick. A sick brain is evidenced by disturbances of consciousness, by delirium or by insanity. Watch your health to keep your mind well."

This is well said. It is the truth. Doctors are more and more convinced that derangements of the mind are to be traced to sick bodies. Perhaps the only evidence of disease is the fact that a mind, formerly normal, has become deranged.

Insane asylums used to be custodial institutions, that and nothing more. That is not the case today. In every well conducted mental institution, the scientific members of the staff are studying the patients. They are seeking to find in the blood or body the reasons for the mental trouble. You know how a drunken man, poisoned with alcohol, will have his thinking machinery thrown into dreadful disorder. When sober, the man is a cultured, straight-thinking, perhaps a brilliant character. When sodden with drink he becomes a muddled, drooling idiot.

Alcohol is by no means the only poison that can accomplish such an unfortunate change in the thinking organ: Pus absorption, the action of poisons developed by germs and their destructive or disturbing effect upon the brain, are facts well recognized by the scientific world.

Unfortunately, the changes in the brain substance may have been so pronounced as to undermine permanently the reason. But the majority of mental disturbances are functional, just as the passing effects of drunkenness are functional.

By this I mean that the brain cells and brain substance are not destroyed. But like the tangling of the telephone wires, the brain machinery is short circuited, so to speak. When the source of the current that is interfering with normal action is found and dealt with, when the tangle is removed, the brain is restored and the thinking proceeds properly. The mind becomes rational. Sanity takes the place of insanity.

There are plenty of mind disturbances which are a long way short of insanity. Mental depression, gloominess, grouchiness, the "blue Monday" feeling—you know them all. All these are symptoms of temporary ill health of the brain.

Overeating, overwork, loss of sleep, incontinence of the bowels, fevers, ptomaine poisoning—these are some of the causes of sluggish thought or temper of good nature. Your brain must be well nourished and properly cleansed.

There is no greater affliction than insanity, even in the mildest forms. In most instances it is a preventable condition. The surest way to have a clear mind and normal thinking machinery is to keep well.

The doctor I quoted gave me splendid advice when he said: "To keep your mind well, watch your health."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

AN auspicious rule of the governing planets marks this as a day for many gratifying and progressive conditions, both in personal and business relations. There is a sign of successful new projects with fine enterprise and good management culminating in financial return and other seals of prosperity. Employment, promotion and preferments are in order and the affairs of heart and home may bring pleasant denouements in many directions.

Sirens of the Air -:- -:- By Vera Hawley

© 1928, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved.

THOSE who are in love think they're lucky because they can see the face of the beloved in the moon. But—what about the lucky aviator, who, winging his joyous way above the clouds and through them, peoples this Cloudland with the face of his adored one? The plane forces its way through a veritable crowd of loveliness and as each fluffy cloud floats by, there he sees watching his every move the face of the girl whom he has left far below.

But sometimes each cloud takes a different face for itself and then he is in a quandary. For he is so sure of his love for the one that all these sirens of the air make him fear. But he needn't, for like the sailors of old, he's lashed to his plane and no tempting songs or beckoning hands can lure him from the one who is waiting for him. So don't worry, you who may be an aviator's sweetheart! It will take more than the sirens of the air to lure him from you. For love—true love—sees nothing, hears nothing, knows nothing, but just the one dearest of all.

LOVE'S AWAKENING -:- A CONTINUATION OF LOVE'S EMBERS

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge and Dicky Have a Quarrel

AS DICKY voiced his conviction that I meant to "throw up my job and stay out here with Junior this winter," I involuntarily thought of an old Negro mammy who used to wash for my mother and retail her conjugal troubles while she worked.

"When dat man of mine gets too uppity," she used to say, "mah neck hairs jes' bristle."

I understood her feeling as the full significance of Dicky's complacent planning of my course came to me. He did not mean to be rude. His adjective was simply an outcropping of his jealous dislike of Philip Veritzen and my association with him. I could have forgiven him that easily. But my bitter resentment was stirred by his calm assumption that he had taken possession of my life again to direct its course in any way he pleased.

We had come very near to each other in these days of watching over our boy's convalescence from the fall. He had been very humble in his contrition for having given Junior permission to climb the big tree in opposition to my wishes. And in my comforting of him, my clinging to him through our trouble, he evidently foresaw a speedy and complete reconciliation. And in true masculine fashion he had at once exercised his old prerogative of making the family decisions.

I already was leaning so far toward the decision to stay at the farm for the winter that if Dicky had put the thing as a request, I think I should have forgotten Lillian's counsel and promised him what he asked. But his calm assumption that there was but one mind in the family, and that his own, made me see red.

"Why, 'of course?'" I asked coolly.

Dicky started and into his eyes came the flame of anger with which I am so familiar. Nothing brings it so quickly as thwarting him in some plan he has made.

"What do you mean?" he snapped. "You heard what the doctor said, didn't you, that Junior must not go to the city this winter?"

"I was with you when he told us," I answered quietly.

"Well, then," he said triumphantly, "will you kindly tell me what else there is to do?"

An imp of perversity prompted my answer.

"Why, you might move your studio out to the farm," I said sweetly. "You often have said you could work better out here than in the city. And Edith is perfectly capable of attending to the magazine work, isn't she, if you get her a moderately priced assistant?"

I think Dicky came nearer to choking at this suggestion than he had done for many a day.

"I suppose you think that's humorous," he snapped at last. "But let me tell you it's in poor taste. However, I suppose I was a fool to expect anything else. When it comes to a choice between Phil Veritzen's job, and the life of your own child, you're not long in making up your mind, are you, old dear?"

From long experience with his rages, I knew that he had no idea of the atrocious thing he was saying, and that in all probability by the next day he would deny—in all good faith—that he ever had uttered it. But the taunt was too maddening to take without retaliation of some kind. Without answering him, I walked to his desk, took paper and a pencil and scribbled his last sentence down. He watched me, evidently too astonished for comment until I had finished and swung around to face him.

"I'd like to remember the wording of this particular gem," I said virily, instinctively choosing from long experience the tone and words most calculated to anger him. "You really have surpassed yourself this time, Dicky. 'When it comes to a choice—'"

But I no longer had an auditor. My husband whirled, and with an especially picturesque and emphatic malediction, dashed out of the room, slamming the door after him.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mankind—and Unkind

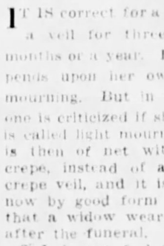
"ETERNAL LOVE" in these days is the kind that lasts until the next girl interrupts you.

* * *

A platonic lover is one who always keeps his fingers crossed, his hand on his pulse, and his alibi ready.

* * *

Somehow, whenever a man forgets to shave, his wife can't help thinking wistfully of all the nice-looking men she "might have married."



HELEN ROWLAND

In lovemaking, the average man has a dent where his bump of intuition ought to be. He always overlooks an ideal opportunity for the first kiss—and then, later, wakes up and bungles around trying to set the stage for it.

* * *

There are the "chase-me" eyes, the "trust-me" eyes, and the "just-try-to-resist-me" eyes—and a man has about as much chance of escaping them all, as a jay-walker crossing Broadway.

* * *

No woman can do anything much with her husband, as long as some other woman "feels sorry for him."

* * *

It is always a surprise to a divorcee, to discover how long it takes her to get over the habit of listening for the sound of a man's key in the latch, evenings.

* * *

When a woman gives a man up, it always leaves a void in her life; but when a man gives a woman up, it is usually because another woman is crowding her out.

* * *

Many a woman who loves her husband can't help thinking tentatively of how fascinating she would look in a widow's weeds.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Mourning

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My husband died just two months ago. I am still wearing a mourning veil. Is this proper or not? I also intend wearing black for a full year, and I will, of course, put my mourning veil on my spring hat. Every one tells me that people do not wear mourning as formerly, is this so?

2. I have two small boys, five and six years old. They have been wearing a mourning band on the left sleeve of their overcoats. Shall I put one on their spring coats also? B. M.

IT IS correct for a widow to wear a veil for three months, six months or a year. Everything depends upon her own reaction to mourning. But in these days no one is criticized if she wears what is called light mourning. The veil is then of net with a band of crepe, instead of a heavy black crepe veil, and it is not required now by good form or good taste that a widow wear a veil at all, after the funeral.

2. I do not feel that you need put mourning bands on the coats of such little children.

Gift Notes

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly tell me if it is correct to send letters of thanks to people who brought me little gifts when I announced my engagement. I had an engagement party.

If so, will you kindly tell me about just how to word them?

W.

YOU should, W., write a letter of thanks to every friend who brought or sent you a gift. Perhaps this will suggest a note of thanks to you.

"Dear Mary:

"How very kind and generous and friendly you were to think of me in such a beautiful way. I cannot tell you how much I appreciate your goodness. What a glorious friend you always are!

"The mirror for my dressing-table is very handsome, and I am most proud of owning anything so beautiful. It is the kind that I have always wanted, and you always seem to have the gracious faculty of knowing just what I want. Thank you a million times, my dearest Mary.

"Dearest love from Bob and me, and a hearty hope of seeing you very soon."

For the Lovelorn

Boots

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your column for some time and think you give wonderful advice. Here is my problem: I am going with two girls at school and they say I am taking their boy friends. The one girl has been going with a boy for over a year and he dropped her, and she said I took him away from her. I would like to know whether I should just "laugh it off." I feel hurt about it as I don't like the talk that is going on, but I like both girls and I know they don't mean it the way the rest of my friends take it. Please advise me, and I remain as

BOOTS.

Since you have done nothing wrong, just try to "laugh it off," my dear.

June

DEAR MISS GALE:

Have been reading your splendid advice and have come to you for help. I have not been speaking to a young man for two weeks. He has heard remarks passed that I was supposed to have said and has been treating me very mean lately, passes me up on the street and drives past and does not look my direction. Is it my place to speak? He has my wrist watch. Would that be a good way to speak to him by asking for it, and then ask him what happened? We are both 21. Is it too young to think of marriage? Should I go out with other young men.

JUNE.

Your idea about the wrist watch seems a good one. Why not try it? Yes, I think you are a little young to marry.

STOLEN LOVE

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Joan Tells Curtis About Her Old Love Affair With Bill Martin

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Joan Hastings, seventeen and beautiful, lives with two old maiden aunts and one of them, Aunt Evvie, tells her of her unmarried mother's tragic love affair and death. Joan falls in love with Bill Martin, a penniless young man, and she is sent away to school. Bill, an innocent victim of a bootlegging gang, is sent to jail and Joan, begging for bail money from the aunts, confesses everything to them. She is put on a train for school in charge of a woman friend of Aunt Evvie's. Bill, freed, bids goodby to his mother, leaving no address and befriending Rollo Keyes, a rich young spender, is given a job by his father. Joan, escaping from the train, reaches his home just after he has gone. Concealing her presence from her aunts she gets a position in a department store and later works as a model in a smart shop. There Mrs. Barstow, a rich society woman, sees her, likes her and asks her to tea. She meets Curtis Barstow who immediately becomes interested in her. Joan goes to see Mrs. Martin and learns that Bill has written but has not asked for her. She thinks he no longer cares. Bill comes home and discovers that Joan is close at hand. Joan meets Bill again and discovers Ruth Gillespie, one of the girls at the shop, is deeply in love with him. Mrs. Barstow puts herself out to be nice to Joan for her son's sake. Joan becomes hysterical when Bill visits her and offers to marry her. Mrs. Barstow invites her to spend a week-end at her cottage in the mountains. When she returns, Ruth questions her about her love affair with Bill. Bill disappears after he has an argument with Rollo's dad. Joan refuses to accept Curtis after he proposes to her. Later, however, she becomes engaged to him. Curtis' mother visits Aunt Evvie and questions her about Joan. Joan constantly thinks of Bill and plans to break her engagement, but changes her mind. Curtis' mother arranges a dinner in honor of Joan and invites her Aunt Evvie, who disgraces her with her manners. Joan sets the date for her wedding and as the time goes on Curtis becomes bored with the many dinners and parties and asks her to elope with him, but she refuses.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXVII.

HE stroked her soft hair, penitent. He had spoken irritably to Joan.

"Forgive me!"

She nodded her head. Through her tightly closed eyes the hot tears trickled slowly, wetting his hand: "Why am I such a coward? Why didn't I tell before . . . why didn't I? When there was time . . ."

"Johnnie, dear, I didn't mean to hurt you. It's the delay—getting on your nerves. Please forgive me."

Curtis asking her to forgive him . . . Curtis whom she was going to mortally hurt. . . . He shouldn't have asked her, if made it harder. This was no time to cry. She struggled desperately for self-control back, the tears that surged within her, a hurting, choking torrent, blinding her, shaking her . . . "Connie wasn't that sort . . . she wouldn't have cheated . . . he had said that . . . Curtis . . .

"Curtis! I can't tell you—I can't—I can't!" All ready she could see his face, his stricken, terrible face. Could feel his agony, his heartbreak, his drawing back from her in loathing and disgust. . . . She put up her hands to shut it out, the thing she was going to see when she had done . . . But she could not shut it out, nor stop the tearing, broken sobs. The tears streamed through her fingers, she could not stop them now, they were stronger than her will.

And through it all, through the tears that blinded her, and the sobs that shook her, she could hear his crooning. "Don't, dear . . . don't dear . . . poor little girl" Curtis still loving her, Curtis whose love she was about to kill. Curtis wanting to comfort her, for whom there was no comfort, for whom there would never be comfort again.

When the tears had stopped, as everything must stop at last, her face was swollen and distorted. The handkerchief he had given her was a wet ball in her hands. . . .

She brushed the disheveled hair from her eyes. "I'm sorry," she said in almost her natural voice. "I had to cry, because it is the end of everything. I couldn't help it, but I've stopped now. I won't cry any more. I'll just tell you, and will you please know when I'm telling you that I didn't mean to cheat? It seems funny now, but I thought—"

"Joan—what are you saying? The end of everything—because I—because—Joan—what is it—"

She let him take her limp cold hands, and went on as if she had not heard—

"I thought that when you loved me you should have me. Even if I wasn't really worth having. You see, I once loved someone who—"

"Joan! My God—what are you saying to me? Joan—"

"Someone who — who wasn't worth having, either, and I wouldn't have cared—I didn't care how bad he was—because I loved him so much. I just wanted him. Anyway . . . So I thought you would love me that way, too—I didn't know, Curtis—I didn't think about your self-respect—until just now. Do you understand why I didn't tell you? Please do. Please understand. I wouldn't have waited so long. I didn't mean to cheat—I didn't mean that—"

"Joan don't torment me—you can't mean—Joan!"

She dropped her eyes then. The red burned her cheeks, her ears, her throat. She had been so steeped in suffering for him she had forgotten this, the shame of telling . . . of having him know . . . the ugliness . . .

He began to walk up and down, his hand pressed to his twitching mouth. When he spoke again it was with his back to her, looking out of the window, into the dark. "So it was true. An anonymous letter to tell me. And I believed you . . ." He turned around and faced her from his corner. "You looked into my eyes and said it was a lie . . . Joan . . . how could you?"

At first she didn't understand. Then it flashed over her, sickly. He thought she was trying to say that she had lied about the silly letter, about the sailor, and someone's lover . . .

"Oh, that isn't what I'm talking about!"

"No? Something else again—Joan, why have you done this to me? Haven't I always been—"

"Yes, always good to me—too good, Curtis. That's why I couldn't tell. I thought and thought. I've been nearly mad trying to decide. One day I'd think I should tell you—and then you'd say something—about loving me so much—"

She heard him groan.

"And I couldn't bear to tell you then . . . so I didn't . . .

"You lied to me, Joan. That's what I can't forgive. When I told you about the letter—"

"But it was a lie, Curtis! It was!"

He came nearer. She saw the flicker of hope in his eyes, the hope that he had misunderstood after all, that she was being hysterical over nothing, over nothing at all—

"Oh, no, no, no!" she cried. "Don't touch me, Curtis! Don't come near me—don't think I'm imagining things. I'm not. I—I never told anyone. Nobody knows. It was when I was 17—I—I—"

He was gripping her arms, hurting her, hurting her unbearably. "Go on—don't stop—who was it? Who was it, I say?"

"Just a boy—a boy I knew. We loved each other, Curtis. I never had any love before. My aunts you know—they didn't love me. I never had any friends. There was a kitten once, it came to the house . . . all black with a little white dot under its chin, and a little pointed pink tongue . . . Heeley . . . Heeley killed it . . ." Her voice broke.

"I don't see what a cat has to do with it."

"No, not only the kitten. Everything, Curtis. The loneliness. Everything so quiet and echoing and hostile. They were all so old, my aunts and Heeley and the house. And I never knew anyone young. Just read books, and dreamed.

"And then this boy—came—and we loved each other. So much that nothing seemed to matter but that. Do you understand, Curtis? I'd like you to understand if you can. It will hurt so much thinking about you not understanding all the rest of my life . . . I don't ask you to forgive me, but couldn't you just try to see how it happened . . . and why I didn't tell you? Couldn't you do that, Curtis?"

But he just sat there with his head turned away from her, his hands like stone. Joan waited, white and frozen and lonely. More lonely than she had ever been before, for Curtis was lost to her now . . . Curtis who a few short minutes ago had loved her . . .

"I don't know what to say to you," the muffled voice went on. "What have you left for me to say? Oh Joan—to think that you—you—"

She could see his shoulders shaking. Was he crying? Did men cry? She wanted to put her arms about his poor shoulders, and comfort him . . . tell him how sorry she was, how sorry . . . But he would not want her arms any more, and, besides, they were too stiff and cold to be comforting . . .

Her coat lay over the book-case. She went over to it, and put it on. He lifted his head.

He pulled himself together with a tremendous effort. Forced himself to speak naturally. "Wait, Joan. I won't have you go home alone. Wait a minute, I'll take you."

She almost smiled. As if it mattered how she got home. As if anything mattered now.

"About breaking the engagement," she said, speaking very fast. "You can say anything you like. Anything that will make it easier for you. I'm sorry I didn't realize before . . . before all the parties . . . It will hurt your mother—"

She heard his rattling sigh. He was thinking about his mother now, and people. What people would say. Quickly, she wrenched the ring from her swollen finger. "Here's—the ring—"

He took it, examining it curiously, as if he had never seen it before. "Couldn't you keep it for a time," he asked, "until we decide—"

"But we have decided!"

"No, not yet. You must give me time—to think it over—"

"But there's nothing to think over! It's all decided. Oh, let's not put it off, let's break now—you don't want me—after what I've told you—"

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair

By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

DIRECTORS of HOME ECONOMICS in Colleges and Normal Schools tell why they prefer Cream of Tartar Baking Powder

"Healthful"—"Economical"—and other reasons—say 12
"No harmful results or residue"—say 14
"Satisfactory"—"Always good results"—declare 26

A LARGE GROUP of these expert Directors of Home Economics in our higher institutions—our colleges, normal schools and technical training schools—recently gave their opinions on baking powders.

88% of those who in answering made a specific choice said: "I prefer Cream of Tartar Baking Powder." And many of them volunteered their reasons.

Royal is the Cream of Tartar baking powder—made always with pure cream of tartar which is a natural fruit product from ripe grapes.

Cakes and biscuits made with Royal rise to a magical lightness. And Royal leaves no trace of bitter taste to tinge their delicate flavor.

BISCUITS. Ask the men whether they'd like home-made hot biscuits for supper tonight. Served piping hot from the oven with honey or jam and plenty of butter, they're a dish fit for a king. For variety some time add 1 tablespoon of sugar to your recipe and use peanut butter instead of plain shortening.

FIG CAKE. Cream 1½ cups sugar and ¾ cup butter; add 1 cup milk. Sift 3 cups pastry flour, 1½ tsp. salt and 4 tsps. Royal Baking Powder; add ½ of the flour then 4 well beaten egg whites, then rest of flour and 1 tsp. lemon extract.

Take ⅔ of the mixture and add 1 tsp. cinnamon, 1 tsp. nutmeg, 1½ cups finely cut and floured figs and 1 tbsp. molasses.

Put in a greased and slightly floured round tube pan a spoon of light mixture and then a spoon of dark mixture alternately. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.). Increase heat to 360° F. and last half hour decrease to 350° F. Bake about 55 min. Makes one 8-inch loaf.

PIRATES ON EDGE FOR OPENER TOMORROW

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Great Panther Line.
Fans Follow Skibos.
Tartan Has Sell-Out.
Pat Herron Rivaled.
Chocolate Bid Fails.
Dundee Won't Quit.

PITT FORWARDS REPULSE ATTACKS

THOUGH Captain Alec Fox, left guard, and his brilliant pair of tackles, Mike Getto and Charley Tully, unquestionably deserves all the praises that are being heaped upon them for their fine work in Pitt's big football games this season, there are two others who must be given lots of credit for the parts they have played in making the Panther line one of the strongest in the college ranks.

Ray Montgomery

These two are Ray Montgomery, center, and Albert Dimeolo, right guard. Neither can be overlooked when any laurels are being passed around.

MONTGOMERY'S passing has been poor at times, it is true, which is not to be wondered at, considering the fact that this is his first season at center, he having previously played guard. But on the defense he has left nothing to be desired, showing all the sterling qualities that he was wont to display at his former position.

An equal measure of praise is due to Dimeolo, who has held up his end in splendid style playing at Montgomery's right as the guard mate of Captain Fox. In a general defensive sense the work of Montgomery and Dimeolo has compared favorably with the best seen around here this year, and each has done his full share toward making the Pitt wall stand out as one of the greatest in the game.

SPEAKING of the strength of the Pitt line, do you know that Carnegie Tech is the only major opponent that has made a first down through the Panther forwards, and the only one that has gained its distance by running attack, save for the single first-and-ten registered by Gilchrist for W. & J. last Saturday after 10 members of the Blue and Gold second team had gone in?

Neither West Virginia nor Syracuse ever made its distance except by forward passes. Carnegie's four first downs on line plunges, therefore, make the Tartan attack look pretty good. And at that, it must be said for the light but valiant Sutherland forwards that they held even the huge John Karcis and his mates until the fourth quarter of the gruelling contest between the Plaid and the Blue and Gold.

Albert Dimeolo

CARNEGIE TECH will not lack rooters when the Skibos invade South Bend next Saturday and take the field against Notre Dame in the important game on which their chance for going through the season without being beaten or tied will be at stake. Clarence Overend, graduate manager of the Plaid, announced yesterday that his entire allotment of 1,500 tickets for the South Bend game had been sold out. The local sale has been three times as heavy as when the Steffenites last visited Notre Dame's field in 1925. Two special trains will carry enthusiasts of this district to South Bend Friday night, and many other fans of this section will make the trip by automobile, to say nothing of numerous Carnegie alumni who will go to the battle scene from different parts of the map.

ONE of the coolest football players in these diggins is Joe Donchess, Pitt's great left end. Whether tackling a runner for a loss, blocking a punt or recovering a fumble—no matter what he may be doing, and he does all things well—Joe never becomes excited, never appears to be the least bit doubtful of victory.

Donchess is paralleling the remarkable record made by Pat Herron, who starred at end for Pitt in 1913-14-15-16, and who was named on Walter Camp's second All-America team in his final year. Herron went out with the reputation of never having been "sucked in" on a play, and Donchess is following right in his footsteps. It has been virtually impossible for opponents to gain at Joe's end this year.

ANOTHER local end, Ten Rosenewelg, of Carnegie Tech, won the commendation of eastern critics when he got a chance to show his class in that region last Saturday. Will Wedge says of him in the New York "Evening Sun:"

"A rousing good end is Rosenewelg, an end used in a remarkable way. Carnegie Tech has a play built around this bird that is pretty. It netted heavy yardage against Georgetown nearly every time used. It was an end-around play and it produced Carnegie's second touchdown. Rosenewelg, from his position at left end, cuts directly toward the rear when his signal is called, swerves to the right, takes the ball sometimes on a double pass and drives into the line through a hole opened up by the right tackle.

"Or sometimes he swings away around and skirts the end farthest away from the one where he was stationed originally. The Blue and Grey front wall, battered and worn by the hard tussle with N. Y. U., had difficulty in stopping this play. Rosenewelg broke loose in the third period near the side line on one of these end-around stunts and bumped and dodged his way 23 yards for a touchdown. He's a big fellow, of 185 pounds, and a fine man on the defense, as well as an unusually good carrier from scrimmage for an end."

John L. Hernon

NOT until next year, at the earliest, will the fight fans of Pittsburgh and vicinity get a chance to see Kid Chocolate, the sensational Cuban Negro bantamweight, in action. Manager John L. Hernon, of Motor Square Garden, tried to book Chocolate for an early date here, but his plans were upset yesterday, when he received the following reply from Louis Gutierrez, the fighter's manager. "I have Chocolate booked for all November in New York, and in December he is fighting in Havana against Chick Suggs. Won't be here again until January, and by that time I would be very much pleased to have Chocolate go to Pittsburgh and fight either Pete Zivic or Howard Mayberry."

LOCAL Queensberry devotees, by the way, will have a chance to see only a few more boxing shows between now and late February, unless Benny Leonard starts something in that line. For as far as the Motor Square Garden Club is concerned its fistic activities must necessarily be limited.

This for the reason that the Garden will be given over to other attractions. Following the show of November 26, an indoor circus will occupy the building from December 1 to December 8, meaning that the usual Monday night fight program must be abandoned on December 3 and possibly also on December 10. After the holiday afternoon boxing bills of Christmas Day and New Year's Day, there will be another fistic suspension in favor of three straight nonsporting exhibits lasting more than a month.

JOHNNY DUNDEE, former featherweight champion, 35 one week from tomorrow, who returned to the ring Monday night after an absence of almost 13 months, is being urged by many of his friends to give up his attempted come-back in spite of his successful start

BUCS END DRILL FOR BOSTON

By CARL W. SHATTO.

DONNING their new uniforms of blue and gold, Pittsburgh's hockey Pirates last night went through their final workout in preparation for the opening battle of the 1928-29 National League compaign, with the Boston Bruins here Thursday night. A light drill is carded for this evening, but it will be no more than a warming up exercise to discourage any possible kink lent upon seeking a home in the Bucs' muscles.

Benny Leonard, retired undefeated lightweight boxing champion and new owner of the local franchise, was the most interested spectator at last night's final drill. As a result of being called to New York shortly after the opening of the three weeks' training grind, Benny had not been able to see his athletes in action until last night, and never before had he had the opportunity to inspect the team play of the lineup which will take the ice when the opening gong sends the Boston and Pittsburgh skaters into action at Duquesne Garden.

LEONARD ENTHUSIASTIC

After developing a bad attack of "housemaid's knees" and other sore afflictions in less than five minutes of scrimmage on the ice, Benny ordered himself to the penalty box, and for more than an hour watched the drill from this vantage point. At the conclusion of the long drill, the new Pirate owner expressed himself as fully satisfied with the condition and team play of his "boys," and unofficially awarded them the championship of the National League and all other circuits known to the hockey world.

While in New York, Leonard availed himself of the opportunity to "spy" on the Americans and the Champion Rangers, and the Bucs, according to their boss, are in better condition than either of the Gotham outfits.

SET FOR FAST START

Manager Odie Cleghorn, while not as enthusiastic as Owner Benny, is confident that the locals will be able to win a money berth. Never since the inception of the National League has a Pittsburgh team been so perfectly primed for a lid-lifter as are the Pirates of today. Odie avers, and he expects his men to get the "jump" on all opponents in the early stages of the race.

Joe Miller, who succeeds Roy Worters in the Pirates nets, showed plenty of class in the final scrimmage, and Toots Holway, six feet and 190 pounds of defense man, has developed so rapidly that he bids fair to more than fill the shoes of the departed Marty Burke.

McCaffery, the dependable, will pair with Holway at defense in the starting lineup, and Milks, Darrash and Cotton will make up the unchanged line.

The Pirate reserve strength is greater than it has been in recent years. Mickey MacKay, veteran wingman purchased from the Chicago Hawks, now is enroute to Pittsburgh and will be in uniform for the opening battle. The deal for MacKay was closed last night. The new Buc is a fast skater and a tricky stick handler, and it is expected that he will add greatly to the spares' punch.

The Bruins, boasting the same lineup which carried them to the American group championship last season, will arrive here early tomorrow morning and will indulge in a limbering up exercise at Duquesne Garden tomorrow noon. The strengthening of the Hub sextet's reserve line has not served to dim their confidence, and they can be excused for regarding themselves as title contenders from start to finish.

BOSTON DANGEROUS FOE

The Pirates realize that the Bostonians are extremely dangerous and that any clash with the Hub foremen means a bruising, grueling battle, but they are confident that they can induce history to repeat. Last season the Bucs gained two victories and four ties in six duels with the blustery Bears, and a repetition of this feat hardly can be regarded as other than satisfactory.

The advance ticket sale indicates that a capacity crowd will witness the 1928-29 inaugural, and Leonard and his associates have seen to it that the first-nighters will find the Garden in A-1 condition. Eleven hundred new seats selling at popular prices have been installed at the rear of the arena, the boxes have been draped and all reserve seats have been covered.

Speed and figure skaters of world renown have been engaged to entertain the fans between periods. Norval Baptie, former world champion speeder on the steel bladers, and Gladys Lamb, New York's most accomplished figure skater, are to entertain tomorrow, and they have signed to return for several additional engagements here.

Leonard is to address the Men's Club of McKeesport at the Tube City tonight.

N. B. A. to Attempt Title Eliminations

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—All commissions of the National Boxing Association have been requested to submit 10 leading contenders in each weight in an effort to arrange logical championship bouts.

President Paul Prehn said plans were being made to schedule title fights in each division at least every six months.

Idaho yesterday filed application for membership in the association. If accepted, its membership would bring the association's total to 29 commissions—22 states, three municipal commissions and four foreign commissions.

CALLAHAN SUSPENDED

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Mushy Callahan, of Los Angeles, junior welterweight champion, has been suspended indefinitely by the Illinois State Athletic Commission for failure to report an injury that caused him to cancel a match in Peoria, Ill., November 12.

'WHOOPEE' STAR FORMER BOXER

By HARRY KECK, SPORTS EDITOR.

A YOUNG athlete's power of self-analysis and conception of his place in the world, embodied in an idealistic philosophy, lie behind the meteoric rise to fame of Pietro Gentile, the 24-year-old juvenile singing star of Eddie Cantor's "Whoopee," which concludes its run of two weeks at the Nixon Theater Saturday night.

From a humble birth in Italy, transplantation to New York at the age of 14, thence to Panama, where he served in the United States Army for three years and took up the sport of boxing, a return to New York, where he tried a little of everything before finding himself, Gentile has come suddenly to a position of eminence in the concert and theater world.

As Wanenis, the Indian boy of education in "Whoopee," which, by the way in his first professional engagement, Gentile has been more or less of a sensation. The volume and range of his voice and his inherent dramatic qualities have won for him the approbation of Cantor, who heard him sing at a private affair and drafted him for his show and regards him as one of his "finds." Prior to being signed by Cantor, Pietro had been considered for a part in one of Earl Carroll's revues and had signed a contract to sign in opera, from which he obtained his release to join "Whoopee."

VOICE ENDS RING CAREER

Pietro laughed yesterday as he recalled how he had deserted the ring for an artistic career. Following his return from Panama, he was drifting from one job to another in New York and finally decided to go back to boxing. He was working out in Stillman's gymnasium and, following a session one day, was singing under the shower. The late Joe Wagner, former bantamweight boxer and later manager, heard him and remarked that no man with such a voice had any business in the ring. He induced Pietro to quit boxing and cultivate his vocal powers.

In due time, Pietro was launched upon his new career. He says he always had done considerable singing, ever since he was a little boy

Rogers Hornsby Signs Cub Contract

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—(INS.)—Rogers Hornsby today was a full-fledged member of the Cubs' family, having affixed his signature to a contract in the presence of President William Veeck and owner William Wrigley.

It was a very pretty little ceremony, which all three seemed heartily to enjoy. A half dozen newspaper cameramen, with a booming flashlight salute, also witnessed the Rajah's signing.

Hornsby comes to the Cubs from Boston Braves in exchange for cash stated to be in excess of $125,000 and five players.

President Veeck said Hornsby's contract with the Bruins covers two years of service, but the prexy did not disclose the salary figure. It is reported, however, that Hornsby will receive $27,000 a year, plus an attractive bonus.

Young Stribling Forsakes 'Plane

MACON, Ga., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Young Stribling, Georgia heavyweight, en route to New York today to begin training for his elimination fight with Jack Dorval November 23, left behind the airplane in which he has flown to many recent bouts.

Stribling did not explain why he had discarded the plane in favor of the rails, but friends here believed that his wife and infant daughter, together with Tex Rickard, New York promoter, may have influenced him against the air route.

BISONS READY FOR W. & J.

LEWISBURG, Pa., Nov. 14.—The Bucknell University football team hit its early-season form last Saturday when it trounced Lehigh, 40 to 0, and thereby put a rosy tinge to its prospects of defeating Washington and Jefferson this Saturday at Johnstown.

For the last three weeks the Bisons, who started the season like national champions, have been in a slump which was largely due to a heavy casualty list. With the return of the injured, however, the playing of the team improved and Saturday found the Herd thundering at its best.

Coach Snavely withdrew his regulars throughout the game and every uniformed man on the bench got in the game. The work of many of the substitute players was exceptionally good and proved that the head tutor has some fine reserve material.

The Bucknell line contained two starting substitutes, but the heavy Lehigh backs succeeded in making only one first down, and that was aided by a five-yard penalty. The fighting forwards strengthened the claim of its supporters of being the best line playing collegiate football today.

To a substitute back went the major share of the individual glory, for Tony Slate of Weirton, W. Va., ran wild with the ball after he displaced a regular.

St. Vincent's Ready For MountaineerCubs

LATROBE, Pa., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Coach Clem Crowe is preparing a special attack for the West Virginia University freshmen, who will play his St. Vincent's College team at College Field Saturday at 2 o'clock. Sam Hammer of Greensburg and Harry Marker of Ligonier are on the freshmen team, so are Arno Wamsley and Robert Latham, former Kiski tackles.

NURMI, RITOLA MAY TURN PRO

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Paavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola, who matched strides for fame and Finland in the last two Olympic games, are going to match them now for money as the headline performers in a Finnish barnstorming tour of American tracks, it became increasingly apparent yesterday.

With Nurmi sailing from Helsingfors with the understood intention of turning professional on his arrival here, the closing day for receiving entries for the National Amateur Athletic Union cross country running championship which Ritola has won five times passed without receipt of wiry Willie's entry.

If the entry is in the mails before midnight it will be accepted. Otherwise Ritola will have let the amateur title on which he has held a strangle hold go by default.

Farley and Risden Draw at Reading

READING, Pa., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Tommy Farley, 139, Philadelphia, and Bobby Risden, 136½, Reading, fought an 8-round draw here last night. In the semi-final bout, Joe Kuhns, 142½, Reading, received the judges' decision over Jack Manley, 145, Wilkes-Barre. Dick Welsh, 120½, Philadelphia, defeated Mickey Doyle, 117½, St. Clair, in another eight-rounder.

Frankie Friday, 124, Reading, knocked out Frankie Paul, 128, also from Reading, in the sixth, and Frankie Smith, 162, Philadelphia, stopped John Engle, 165, Sinking Spring, in the second.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Pinky May, New York bantam, and Eddie Burl of Mobile, fought a 10-round draw here last night.

PANTHERS LEAVE TONIGHT

By JESS CARVER

ELMER LAYDEN and his Durable Dukes of Duquesne University are preparing to move into the Pitt Stadium bag and baggage this coming Saturday, where they will entertain Tommy Holleran and his Thiel College eleven of Greenville.

It is difficult to place this Thiel eleven on any home field. They play three games in Pittsburgh annually, and will be far more familiar with the Stadium than will the Dukes. Usually one would be inclined to favor the home town team against an invader, especially when the elevens appear to be as evenly matched as the local Irish and the Lutherans, but with Duquesne totally unfamiliar with the stadium terrain and surroundings, Thiel is going to have an edge on the Red and Blue.

I do not think that either team is relatively stronger than they were in 1927 when the Dukes won an 8-to-7 victory here. Thiel still has Stan Berkman and an improved line. The Dukes have made a general improvement in all departments of play, and have a better backfield combination than last fall.

AERIAL DUEL LOOMS

The game threatens to develop into a forward passing duel, with Berkman heaving 'em for the Lutherans and Benedict and McCarthy for the Dukes. Layden is going to use every means at his command to bolster the locals' aerial game in the drills this week, besides strengthening the not too strong running attack.

Thiel came out of the game with St. Canisius at Buffalo on Saturday in fair physical condition. This means that the Holleran line, which was powerful enough to hold Pitt in check earlier in the fall and that kept Tech pretty busy a week later will be at full strength here.

Pitt will get a workout this afternoon and then entrain for Nebraska, where the Panthers and Cornhuskers are scheduled to battle Saturday. The team will arrive in Chicago tomorrow morning, drill at Stagg Field, the home gridiron of the University of Chicago, in the afternoon and then move on to Omaha, Nebraska, where a practice session is to be held on Friday. Coach Sutherland will not take his Panthers into Lincoln until Saturday morning.

Pitt's chances of beating Nebraska, while still far from certain, have been greatly improved with the return to the lineup of Plug Parkinson. Parks's work

OKE RESIGNS, ELDRED SIGNED AT HIGHLAND

By VERNON SWARTSFAGER.

One of the most radical golf shifts of the year has taken place at the Highland Country Club, announcement of which was made yesterday. Jack Oke, for years professional at the West View Club has resigned, and Vincent Eldred of Olean, N. Y., has been signed to succeed him. The pot has been boiling for some time and only yesterday was the matter definitely decided.

Oke, the first Canadian open champion and one of the most popular professionals of the district, decided to leave Highland for greener fields, and, much to the consternation of club officials, announced his resignation before leaving for the South, where he will hold down a winter berth for the season.

He was dissatisfied with the way things were going at the West View club and decided to make a change for the better.

Vincent Eldred, his successor, is a mighty fine lad. Vince is not altogether new to this district. In the West Penn-Western New York pro matches, as well as the P. G. A. and National open championship qualifying rounds, Eldred has been seen in action here. Other than being a superb golfer and scorer, Eldred is said to be an excellent teacher.

Jack will officially wind up his services with Highland at the tag end of this season, while Eldred will report for work early in the spring.

The Highland Country Club had been dickering with Horton Smith, well-known Western pro, for some time, it is understood, but was unable to come to terms with him.

U. of Detroit Eleven May Play on Coast

DETROIT, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—A post-season football game between the undefeated University of Detroit team and the Olympic Club team of San Francisco, Calif., loomed today as probable.

Charles E. Doria, athletic director of the University of Detroit, announced receipt of a message from the Olympic Club asking for a game December 8 in the University of California Stadium at Berkeley. Doria said he is willing to take his team to the Pacific Coast and began negotiations for an agreement on financial terms.

Crystal Gazer Predicts Win For Badger

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Nov. 14.—(INS.)—Superstitious bettors today were putting their money on Wisconsin to beat Iowa in Saturday's midwestern gridiron classic following the prediction here of a noted mystic that the Badger eleven would win.

The forecast was made by Madame Zudella, of New York, crystal gazer, in a lecture before the Cotupus Club. She declared Wisconsin would win by the score of 7 to 0.

The woman's talk created a great deal of amusement among the several hundred persons who heard it.

BIG BILL WINS

LANCASTER, Pa., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—William T. Tilden, II, defeated Fritz Mercur, of Bethlehem, in an exhibition tennis match here yesterday. The scores were 6-2, 6-3 and 6-3. Another set was played at the request of several hundred persons who witnessed the match and Mercur downed Tilden, 6-3.

BAN SOCCER LEADERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Nathan Agar, one of the founders of the United States Football Association, and Wilfred Hollywood, secretary of the Southern New York State Association, have been suspended for all time by the soccer governing body as the latest step in the struggle between soccer factions.

OLYMPICS MEET WEST VIEW ON SUNDAY

By TOM BIRKS.

WITH West View and McKeesport Olympics renewing hostilities at Rainbow Gardens next Sunday, East Pittsburgh Firemen meeting the Fort Vue Quakers in their annual classic at Quarry field, and Lawrenceville Mohawks scheduled to meet Oakmont on the latter's field, there is every reason to feel that followers of the independent racket will have another real football schedule next Sunday for their afternoon sport.

Dash Kline is taking the Quakers to the Quarry grounds on Sunday to try and even up the one-sided victory of the Firemen last season when the Zoltic aggregation summarily dropped the Quakers from the list of contenders. This season the feeling is that both clubs are much stronger and the writer feels it is also going to be a game where the defences will predominate.

East Pittsburgh will not have Chontas in the game. Chontas has been with the Firemen all season, but last Sunday returned to his first love at Fort Vue, and this game will see him in action against the Purple and White of East Pittsburgh.

How will West View fare in its first trip away from home in many seasons? Many fans who watched the Klinzing boys in action feel that no club in the district will score through that line, of which Moon Klinzing seems to star. And with that in mind the Parkers had little trouble in stopping that aerial attack of the Sullivan-coached club. Both teams say that Sunday is another day, and in this game many reputations are going to be made or broken. It is games of this kind that land the players on the all-star teams. Both clubs are cluttered up with real talent and, unless over anxiety spoils the game, McKeesporters will see a real battle.

Now that Coach Restelli has got that Oakmont gridiron machine functioning the Allegheny River fans are going to see a different club in the last three games. Oakmont looked good in the Verona game, and Restelli stated last evening that the Lawrenceville Mohawks are going to run into the same type of football. Next Sunday Ziggy Anderson, the Strip flash, will show his stuff pitted against Restelli and much comment is being made in the comparison.

Each week that rolls around in the independent racket seems to indicate that selecting backfield men for the mythical all-star team is going to be a tough job. Each week there is a flock of 0-0 games, which means the defensive part of the works is functioning far better than the offensive of either team. True there are plenty of good men in the district, but not enough who place themselves without question on any team. There is no player who could be selected with the same sort of confidence that placed the name of Billy Doll on all teams last season.

Penn Grid Squad Given Light Drill

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Lou Young, Pennsylvania football coach, continued to rest his first string football eleven yesterday, and although the first string line appeared on the field in uniform, the backfield men who played against Harvard were told to remain away from the field.

MOUNTAINEERS WORK HARD; STUMPP OUT

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 14.—Minus services of the two sophomores Eddies, Stumpp and Barring, flashy ball toters, the West Virginia football toters squad went through a brisk, but short workout here this afternoon. Stumpp will see no more football this season, it was definitely announced today. His triple threat performer's leg is now in a cast and he will probably not report for basketball, at which he is one of the best in the tri-state, until the first of the year.

Bartrug's injured thumb which was dislocated at the wrist, is showing little improvement and it would not be surprising to see this fine punter and ball toter on the sidelines at Clark Griffith's Stadium next Saturday when George Brown is encountered. "Cassie" Brown and "Boxcar Bus" Lamie are staging a merry fight for Stumpp's place, while "Big Sleepy" Glenn is ready to fill Bartrug's kicking shoes. The interest in the Mountaineer-Hilltopper battle is at a fever heat here and at least one thousand West Virginia football fans will be on hand next Saturday. All indications point to one of the most spectacular clashes of the entire season and the Mountaineer followers believe that their team has an even chance to win.

Edna Fox Leader In National Trials

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Edna Fox, hound owned by J. S. Lindsay, of Winchester, Ky., was off with the pack early today with a high scoring advantage of 135 points on the final day of the trials of the National Fox Hunters' Association near here.

Sixteen hounds were eliminated yesterday, including Stella Britton, owned by W. R. Dudley, of Bramwell, W. Va., ranking stake hound up to the time of the elimination. Adverse weather was blamed by many of the dog owners for failure of their respective entries.

Hitchet Out, owned by Robert Rodes, of Bowling Green, Ky., with a score of 105 points, was in second place today, and Carolina Beauty, owned by M. H. Steele, of Spencer, N. C., remained in third place.

Martinez Beaten

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Tony Vaccarelli, New York welterweight, outpointed Hilario Martinez, of Spain, in a bruising 10-round bout at the New Lenox A. C. last night. Vaccarelli was the stronger and the cleaner puncher and held the edge throughout. Vaccarelli weighed 144½, Martinez 144*.

Sports Comment

By JAMES J. LONG

Monday night, when he won a decision over Gaston Charles of France in a 10-round bout at New York.

Dundee, however, declares that he will do nothing of the kind. He argues that an occasional fight will do him more good than harm; that as long as he knows he is going to box occasionally he lives the regular and abstemious life of a fighter, but that if he knew he would not fight again he might let himself drift into soft living and poor condition.

Johnny Dundee

"I DO not intend to retire of my own accord or let anybody else retire me," Dundee said. "What right has any one to tell me that I must quit boxing? Boxing is everything to me. Without it I am lost. I have been in the game for 18 years, more than half of my life. What will I do with myself if I can't keep on boxing? When a fellow has been in a certain occupation for as long as I have he cannot quit. Why, I know many business men who have retired, but always they have had to go back to their business. It is that way with me. I know my own case better than any one else. I don't get hurt when I fight, beyond maybe a few little bumps and bruises. When the time comes for me to quit I will know it better than any one else. Until that time comes, nobody can make me quit."

Army Grid Stars Shine on Track

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Almost half the membership of Army's football squad of 38 players are members of the Military Academy track team, according to Major P. B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics, who has just investigated athletic activities of the Army football squad in other fields of sport. Three members set a new record in the shot put for three successive years, Hutchinson, halfback, holds the Academy record in the pole vault while Stuart, another back who saw considerable action in the DePauw game, holds the broad jump record.

"Bill" Hall, regular center of the team, is captain of the track team. He was timed for the 100-yard dash at 10.1 seconds, the 220 in 22.7 seconds, the 440 in 51.5 seconds and at the Penn relays last year took second place in the 3,000 meter steeplechase.

MARKS SPEAKS ON YOUTH

Four ways to tell whether your boy has a chance to be a success in school, in college and in business life were told yesterday by J. L. Marks, famous football coach and dean of the Kiski Preparatory School, in his speech before the Pittsburgh Advertising Club at the Chamber of Commerce.

1. "Can he take his books and do his night studies without being told?"
2. "Can he take an allowance, live on it, and come out with a balance at the end of the week? (More boys are ruined by looseness in money than by any other thing).
3. "Can he get out of bed without being pulled?"
4. "Can he deliberately and knowingly flunk in an examination rather than 'crib' the answers from someone else?"

DEMPSEY TALK KEEPS UP

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. — (AP.)—Jack Dempsey's second comeback campaign apparently hasn't got beyond the talking stage yet.

The old Manassa Mauler met Tex Rickard yesterday in a conference widely ballyhooed as of momentous import, but both said after the meeting they had talked about everything but boxing. Tex said Dempsey might talk about the question of coming back to the ring at a dinner party later in the day, but added that nothing would be given out for publication for several days at least.

Whatever the situation actually is, close followers of the ring are certain that the former heavyweight champion again will don the gloves and do what he can to restore public interest in the cauliflower industry and, it may be added, increase his bankroll by half a million or more.

GARDEN ARENA FIGHTLESS MONDAY

THERE will be no boxing show in Motor Square Garden next Monday night owing to the inability of the club to line up a card that would improve on the recent attendance.

Promoter Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, will complete his program today for his show tomorrow night. He has Howard Mayberry, Donora, and Eddie O'Dowd, of Columbus, matched for the 10-round main bout and Battling Gizzy, of Donora, pitted against Jack O'Banyan, of Clairton, for the six-round semi-final. Walter Dickerson, of California, Pa., and Harry Spencer, of Washington, Pa., will appear in the second bout.

Johnny Mellow, of Detroit, meets Freddie Fitzgerald, of Youngstown, in the main bout at Washington, Pa., one week from next Monday night.

Emmett Rocco, Ellwood City heavyweight, boxes Joe Sekyra, of Dayton, in a return bout at Youngstown tonight.

Tony Ross, of Carnegie, who recently returned from Indianapolis, has removed with his family to Sharon and will make his headquarters there, but plans to do much of his boxing around Pittsburgh this winter. He is now a full-fledged welterweight and ready to meet anybody in that division.

Tommy Ward, of the North Side, one of Charley Luckl's boxers, is matched with Johnny Brown, at Johnstown, Thursday night of next week. Johnny Michaels, of the same stable, meets Chet Smallwood in one of the preliminaries to the Emmett Rocco-Joe Sekyra bout at Youngstown tonight.

Ruth's Trust Fund Is Increased By $10,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Babe Ruth's trust fund has grown by $10,000.

The big sock man of the New York Yankees came to town yesterday, visited his bank and deposited enough cash to increase his trust fund to a grand total of $130,000. The Babe started the fund after his disastrous season of 1925, arranging the investment so that he could not touch the principal. The fund now assures the Babe a yearly income of $10,000 or thereabouts. Practically all of the principal has come from Ruth terms "commercial by-products," such as barnstorming trips, vaudeville, the movies and advertising.

Ministers Turn Down Offers of Charity Aid

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—The charity race meeting sponsored by Col. E. R. Bradley at Idle Hour Farm Monday netted at least $18,000, which will be prorated among approximately 30 orphan institutions in Kentucky, it was announced this afternoon by Barry Shannton, vice president and treasurer of the Idle Hour Farm Association, said the sum probably will be increased when reports are made on concession privileges and a number of tickets still out. Col. Bradley said he intends to hold a similar meeting at his farm each year.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 14.—AP.)—Louisville ministers of the Methodest Church, South, at regular weekly conference here, voted unanimous opposition to having orphanages of their denomination accept any of the money raised yesterday at Col. E. R. Bradley's one-day charity race meeting at his Idle Hour Farm, near Lexington.

TENDER YOUNG CHICKEN . . . with DELICIOUS SWEETBREADS À LA KING

This week on PENNSYLVANIA DINERS

PLUMP, tender chicken and delicate white sweetbreads simmer together in golden creamy butter.

Beside them, in another pan, sliced green peppers give their pungent flavor to a bubbling butter sauce. Presto—they are poured in with the chicken and sweetbreads, zestful sauce and all, with a generous addition of sliced young mushrooms.

In goes the rich cream sauce. Slowly the well beaten yolks of new-laid eggs and pure rich cream are stirred in. Now just a dash of lemon juice, and the delicious whole is ready to be poured over crisp golden-brown toast.

On all Pennsylvania menu cards this week you find this summed up in "Chicken and Sweetbreads à la King"—served with parsley potatoes and green peas. Behind every item on the card is the same careful selection of the best raw materials, the same conscientious preparation and cooking. But for delicate, zestful flavor, this has few rivals. Try it.

PENNSYLVANIA CHEFS are specially trained to prepare such delicious dishes as these at three big Pennsylvania dining car schools at New York, Columbus and Chicago

CHOCOLATE TO BE BUSY

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Kid Chocolate, flashy Cuban Negro bantamweight, has undertaken an ambitious program for this season. He has signed to fight in Madison Square Garden with Joe Scalfaro, Archie Bell and Kid Francis. The dates have not yet been selected.

STEINKE MAT VICTOR

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Hans Steinke, Germany, won two of three falls from Stanley Stasiak, Poland, in a rough, bitterly-contested wrestling match here last night. Pat McGill, Kansas City, and Charley Hanson, Omaha, Neb., were the winners in preliminary matches.

CUBS IN CENTER OF BASEBALL SPOTLIGHT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

NOW that Rogers Hornsby is signed, sealed and delivered, the Cubs occupy the center of the baseball spotlight. Moreover, they seem to be ready for another financial cleanup.

In the past two seasons the Bruins, in their home games, have played to more than 1,000,000 ans. In 1929 they are apt to break all attendance records, especially if the Cubs jump off aright and stay in the race.

Did you ever ponder the profits gleaned by one William Wrigley since Joe McCarthy went over to Chicago to show him how to run is shebang? It isn't the president or owner who puts a ball team over; it's the manager and players.

Wrigley, to give him credit, seems to realize that he knows very little about baseball, but he shows his rare judgment by refusing to interfere with the workings of a strange machine.

BIG SALARY ROLL

Playing to 1,000,000 folks in the home contests means that the Cubs drew in at least that many dollars. The visiting clubs took away a little less than one-fourth of the million, leaving three-quarters of the pie for the chewing gum king.

The salary roll of the Chicago club hardly exceeded $200,000. The better than a half-million remaining is just about all profit, it being calculated that the revenue from the Cubs' games abroad would take care of expenses other than players' salaries.

So we will say that the Bruins cleared $1,000,000 in the past two years. That's a pretty fair profit on an investment appraised, we shall say, at $3,000,000.

Hornsby, it is reported, owns a contract valued at $40,000 per season, it being a holdover from his agreement with Boston people.

HOW ABOUT M'CARTHY

What will Marse Joe McCarthy collect for his services next season? If Wrigley is as appreciative as he is said to be the boss of the team may receive at least as much as his star slugger.

It may be that Hornby's salary is not as high as the estimate given, but it is admitted generally that he is getting almost twice as much as any other player in the National League.

And in view of his glamorous success in Chicago, it is altogether likely that McCarthy has run up the financial scale in an astonishing manner, astounding, at least, to one who carried a minor league managerial contract for several years before he made the grade.

Chillysauce

Knute Rockne, had he stayed at chemistry, might have gone far. He seems to be at his best, however, when giving vent to his feelings with his football stars about him, especially between halves of a highly important game.

From one who long has been intimately associated with Notre Dame and Rockne I learn some interesting sidelights on the Viking coach, who just now is the talk of the football world. Don't feel, dear reader, that Knute, when he talks to his athletes, is a prototype of the foul-ball coach who resorts to a lot of repulsive language; he is not that kind.

Two years ago there was a game of football at Forbes Field that will always stay with Carnegie Tech adherents. For some reason—several have been advanced—the inspirational coach remained in Chicago and watched the Army and Navy while Tech was gaining a great triumph over Notre Dame. Perhaps that defeat was a good thing for the South Benders, and it might have been just as severe had Rockne been along, despite the tactical errors charged to his understudies. Notwithstanding all of these "ifs," Rockne probably was a sick coach when the news reached him in Chicago.

Football lovers will recall that the Irish had one more very important engagement that year. They had to meet the crack University of Southern California team to wind up the season, and they had to travel to the coast to do so. Knute the Rock certainly wanted to win that game, he being quick to realize that a triumph over the westerners would have a good effect on everything connected with Notre Dame.

Well, what did Rockne do? In the first place, and while the Tartans were in the midst of their joy delirium, Knute instructed his assistants to gather together 101 Tech scorecards and programs. Soon the South Bend athletes were on the train bound for California. Imagine their feeling when on awakening on the first morning out they found Tech scorecards in their berths. Those were kicked all over the car, but the next morning another set had been placed in the berths to greet the waking grid stars.

Rockne employed this bit of "psycho" to "rib" up his boys. To "lay it on" properly Knute gave the players the final dash of Tartan sauce as they left for the playing field. Standing in front of the Notre Dame players as they rushed from their clubhouse was a boy "selling" Carnegie Tech scorecards. And the players could get only one kind of satisfaction—a victory over the coast champions. They did this.

Wallace Beaten

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Billy Wallace, the lightweight championship contender from Cleveland dropped a close ten round decision to Joey Medill of Chicago at the Hippodrome arena last night.

Medill fought a mauling fight but Wallace appeared to land the cleaner punches and consistently eluded Medill's left hooks.

NATIONAL TITLE STILL IN DOUBT

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—It will take the final salvo of the football campaign in a series of engagements to be played as late as December 8 to determine the final rating in this year's race for national honors.

It happens that four of the teams now conspicuously involved in the nation-wide tussle do not close their drives until that date. Many an anxious ear will be turned to the reports of Notre Dame's invasion of Southern California's stronghold, Georgia Tech's traditional tussle with the University of Georgia at Atlanta and Florida's battle with Tennessee at Nashville on December 8.

Southern California is unbeaten, in fact the only major Pacific Coast team that has suffered no worse than a tie and that with California. Georgia Tech, Florida and Tennessee are bowling along at the top of the Southern Conference heap, all with spotless slates and all helping to beat the gridiron tomtoms for Dixie as they seldom have been beaten before.

SITUATION WAS REVERSED

Last year the situation was reversed when the Georgia rivals came down to the climax conflict. Georgia's Bulldogs were riding the crest. They had beaten a great Yale team, with Bruce Caldwell, and won nine in a row only to have their national title hopes smeared in the mud of Grant Field by Tech's mighty array.

Now it is Tech's turn to be travelling along high, wide and handsome while Georgia has absorbed defeats at the hands of Yale and Florida. It would be an ironic gesture for the Bulldogs to take revenge and conquer their old rivals, Tech, in the final game, assuming the Yellow Jackets go until then without a defeat. They also have Alabama and Auburn in the way.

Tennessee and Florida must avoid a number of pitfalls if there is to be the crucial aspect to their final game. The Vols must beat Vanderbilt this Saturday to keep in the running, while Florida's Fighting 'Gators must dispose of Clemson and Washington and Lee.

After an erratic start Notre Dame, if not able to claim any national title laurels itself, appears bent on making it unpleasant for a few others outstanding as championship contenders.

The Hoosiers upset the Army's hopes last Saturday and will attempt to check the unbeaten dash of Carnegie this week on their home stamping grounds at South Bend. After that the Notre Dame nomads will go west in search of Southern California's scalp.

DRAMATIC TOUCH

There is a dramatic touch to the Carnegie-Notre Dame affair, for it will be remembered the last time they met, the Tartans sprang one of the biggest upsets of recent years, handing the Hoosiers their only defeat of the season to the tune of 19 to 0.

Howard Harpster, now captain of Carnegie, was the star of that stunning reversal two years ago. He kicked a brace of field goals and otherwise caused the Hoosiers no little annoyance. Now Harpster, one of the outstanding candidates for all-America quarterback honors this season, is leading as powerful an array as the East has produced this year.

There will be all the elements of a stirring scrap when Tech's powerful line, leading the way for Harpster and the 233-pound battering ram, John Karcis, clashes with the Hoosier clan that beat the Army in such spectacular fashion.

There is plenty of foot in football this year even if the boys are not doing very well at kicking goals after touchdowns. Such conspicuous eastern punters as Eddie Bartrug, of West Virginia; Jim Mooney, of Georgetown, and Harpster, of Carnegie, have had a lot to do with the successes of their teams.

LIGHT CO. HAS STRONG TEAM

By JULIUS LEVIN.

Former collegians will play a conspicuous role in the Duquesne Light Company basketball team this winter, no less than four former college stars having turned out for the quintet, according to Manager Kempton F. McNutt. The team, which will play an independent schedule of games at the South Side Market House, is contemplating booking home-and-home games with the Goldensons, Duquesne Lafayettes, Enoch Rauhs, Erie County Electrics, Akron and other well-known professional quintets. All home games will be played at the South Side Market House on Saturday nights.

Heading the list of collegiate luminaries is Paul Fisher, who was a member of the Pitt Panthers of 1927, national champions. Fisher now is employed by the Duquesne Light Company and is striving to win a regular berth on the basketball team. George Sullivan, Penn State; Milton Frable, Bucknell, and Dusty Rhodes, Allegheny College, are the other collegians out for berths.

Besides playing an independent schedule of games, the Light passers will be a contestant in the Commercial-Industrial League.

The Pittsburgh District of Labor Sports Union of America is planning to organize a basketball league in this section for all workers' sports organizations in this vicinity. Bill Albertson, 222 Coltart square, is handling all arrangements and is ready to hear from teams interested in joining the circuit.

The Goldensons of the South Side, composed of former Morry players, will meet the leading professional and independent clubs at the Market House this year, according to Fred Miller, manager of the team. The Goldensons are likely to enjoy their best season on the floor this winter.

In the opening games of the Bankers League at Fifth Avenue High School last night, Peoples defeated Real Estate, 28-25, and Mellon defeated Farmers, 52-26.

STATE GETS SET FOR MAROON BATTLE

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Coach Hugo Bezdek sent the Penn State varsity through a stiff scrimmage against the scrubs yesterday in preparation for the Lafayette game Saturday. The honors for the afternoon's workout were even, each team scoring a touchdown.

The scrubs gave the first-string men an uneasy hour, working the ball deep in the varsity territory time and again. Most of the play was in first team's half of the gridiron. Diedrich got off for a long run to tally for the varsity touchdown, while a pass, Collins to Struble, evened the score.

Bezdek made frequent changes in his lineup and at one time had seven sophomores at work for him.

RAY-QUAFI TO RACE

CHICAGO, Nov. 14—(AP.)—El Quafi, 1928 Olympic marathon champion, and Joie Ray, America's premier distance runner, will match strides for the fourth time in their professional career over a 25-kilometer (16-mile) course at the Coliseum Sunday night.

34 Mares Bring $127,400 at Auction

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Thirty-four mares from the Harry Payne Whitney stud were sold for a total of $127,400 at the stable's first public auction held yesterday at the Whitney farm near here.

The prices ranged from $200 up to $12,500, with an average of $3,748. Penitent, ch. 9, by Pennant - Regret by Broomstick, brought the top bid. The daughter of the only filly ever to win the Kentucky derby was sold to H. C. Hatch, of Toronto, Canada, for $12,500. Three other mares sold for $10,000 or more. Yashmak, ch. 9, by Broomstick-Baksheesh by Hamburg, was purchased for $10,500 by Norman Church, of Elgin, Ill. Constellation, b. 9, by Broomstick-Starling by Hamburg, and Imp. Marches II, chm. qwn., each brought $10,000. The former mare was sold to W. F. Axton, of Louisville, and the latter to C. J. Fitzgerald, agent.

W. & J. PREPPING FOR TILT WITH BUCKNELL

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 14.—As the major college football event in Western Pennsylvania next Saturday, the game at Johnstown between Washington and Jefferson and Bucknell is attracting more attention than usually would be given a duel between two teams beaten several times.

Pittsburgh and Carnegie Tech, Wash-Jeff's chief rivals for support in the Western Pennsylvania area, will both be on foreign fields, the Panthers being scheduled for a game at Lincoln, Neb., with Nebraska and the Tartans being on the book for a game in Indiana with Notre Dame. Their absence leaves Wash-Jeff, the sole member of the tri-state "Big Four" playing in Pennsylvania and the contest consequently is counted upon to attract not only the partisans of both teams and gridiron enthusiasts who live in the Johnstown area, but the neutral fans from a wide radius. The Presidents are going about their business of preparation for the contest at the end of the week just as if they had not suffered any reverses this season. The players came through the Pitt game fairly well, altohugh both Aschman and Douds aggravated their hurts somewhat. "Bus" Edwards, regular left halfback, who was not permitted to enter the Panther engagement on account of an injury, is recovering and will probably be able to take his place in the lineup against the eastern Pennsylvanians.

Coach Kerr is endeavoring in the short practice permissable this week to build up his team's offense. The Red and Black attack was negligible in the Pitt combat, but this was partly due to the wet whether and the slippery field. The Wash-Jeff attack has been built for dry ground and the Presidents consequently are hoping for more secure footing in the Johnstown engagement. Tomorrow will see the last hard practice session for the team. The squad will be taken to Johnstown on Friday evening and consequently the extent of the practice session on that day will be limited. All the work is being done in secret and no spectators will be admitted to the field during the week.

Turnesa, Cuici Cop Pinehurst Tourney

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Joe Turnesa, of White Plains, N. Y., and Henry Cuici, of Bridgeport, Conn., won the ninth annual mid-south best ball tournament here yesterday, setting a new tournament low score with 131 strokes for 36 holes. They had cards of 66 for the morning and 65 for the afternoon.

In second place came Gene Sarazen, of Long Island, teamed with Mike Brady, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., with a score of 133, made up of rounds of 67 and 66. Jim Barnes, of Pelham, N. Y., teamed with Tom Kerrigan, of Siwanoy, N. Y., came in third with 73 and 64 rounds for a total of 137.

against Wash-Jeff was admirable in the extreme. He seems to have suffered but little from the long layoff. At least, you can't tell W. and J. anything different.

TECH IN FORM

Carnegie has an extra day for practice at home prior to their departure for South Bend where Notre Dame is to be played this week. Tech will drill today and tomorrow, and then leave tomorrow evening for Chicago, moving over to South Bend from that city.

The Tartans, one of the two unbeaten elevens in the east, are right at the head of the list when it comes to picking possible national champion contenders. The Irish are right up there again following their sensational triumph over the Army at New York.

Notre Dame, unbeaten on its home gridiron for 23 years has that record to keep clear and besides is anxious to secure revenge over the local Scotchmen for the beating it was handed here two years ago by Howard Harpster and his crew. You may anticipate a tough ball game.

Unless the Georgetown eleven that faces West Virginia at Washington this week-end is greatly improved over the one displayed at Albany last Saturday, the Mountaineers appear due to add a further victory to their already swollen list.

GEORGETOWN RAGGED

Georgetown played very ragged football against Tech. Aside from a fairly well conceived aerial game, which Tech should have thwarted better than it did, the Washington machine failed to demonstrate much strength. Late in the game, Bozek and Schmidt, substitute halfbacks, managed to slip outside the Tartan tackles and get away for a bit of yardage, but once within the shadow of the goal and the attack fell flat.

There is this to be said of the Hilltoppers — they certainly were not at the heights for Tech that they must have been for New York U. Herb Kopf, former Wash-Jeff star and assistant coach to Lou Little, told me on Friday as the Hilltoppers were working out that he was afraid that the team would be dead and that he was certain that it would not click as it had against Meehan's club. He was absolutely correct.

ALABAMA NEXT FOR GA. TECH

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 14.—(AP)—The hand of injury has descended heavily on the football title of Alabama, but just how many of the Red Shirts will be able to cast aside crutches and oppose Georgia Tech Saturday is still problematical.

Babe Pearce, veteran center, and Flash Suther, sophomore backfield sensation, however, seem certain for bench assignments this week end. Pearce is out with a twisted knee and Suther's shoulder is in cast from injuries suffered in the Wisconsin encounter 10 days ago.

Campbell, who replaced Suther in the Kentucky game Saturday, is reported unable to scrimmage and will be held in reserve. Clements and Boykin, linesmen, also are reported hurt, but are considered likely starters against Tech.

Tennessee and Vanderbilt are making ready for their clash at Nashville.

Both teams should be in top form with Armistead and Schwartz matching skill as ball carriers with Hack and Mack, touchdown twins of Tennessee. McIver, the Mack of the Knoxville eleven, is now leading point scorer of the South, while Buddy Hackman, his running mate, is also well up in that select circle.

Another game that will focus attention is the Clemson-Florida encounter at Jacksonville.

Louisiana State will meet its major test when, unbeaten and untied, the Tigers invade Athens to meet the Georgia Bulldogs.

Virginia Poly, the other unbeaten team, is in fair condition for Washington and Lee at Lexington.

FORMER BOXER

in Italy, but never consumed his talent seriously until advised by friends that his future lay in that direction. For only a year now he has been training that voice and his possibilities are said to be almost limitless. He does not care particularly for the theater, nor for the operatic stage, his ambition being to tour the world in concert work. Above all else, he prefers singing in churches, and he first attracted general attention by his vocal efforts at charity functions in and around New York. He has a standing offer, he says, to join the Metropolitan opera company.

WAS "K. O. MURPHY"

It was as "K. O. Tommy Murphy" that Pietro scintillated in the Panama rings during his service in the Army. He had 15 bouts and won the first seven with knockouts in the first round. He lost only one and whipped his vanquisher in a return bout. He became the welterweight champion of the Canal Zone.

The athlete-singer, who among his other accomplishments, recently won a culinary contest against a field of some 200 women in New York, also has gained some fame as the "Man With the Perfect Form," and has been a model for studies of the human figure by some of the leading sculptors in New York. He explained in the course of an interview how he attained this symmetry of form and how, in attaining it, he had paved the way for his singing success. When he began to train down, less than a year ago, he scaled 185 pounds. Today he tips the beam at 150. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall. His chest measurement formerly was 42 inches. Now it is 39 inches. His hips measured 42 inches, today they are 38. His thigh was 22 inches, and now it is only 20¾. His calf has been reduced from 15¾ inches to 14¼.

"I took stock of myself when I was drifting about unable to find myself," he said, "and concluded that three equations entered into the making of perfection in a human being. One is mentality, another the spiritual side and the third the physical man. Checking up, I figured I was lacking on the physical side, and so went back into the gymnasium to prime myself along these lines. When I hit the mark physically, I began to click all 'round. I had struck a perfect balance and could feel it in my well-being. As soon as I reached this perfect state, things began to break for me and I was on the way to success.

EXPLAINS HIS SYSTEM

"Two of the most important factors essential to physical perfection are perfect carriage and deep, full breathing. My army life gave me the carriage of a soldier and I think a form of military exercise is of great value to any one. As for the correct breathing, I taught myself to breathe in such a manner that I am exhilarated by every breath I take. Here, watch this, and be inhaled, exhaled and inhaled again, drawing in his stomach muscles until they appeared to be touching his backbone.

"Just try that a few times. It is very simple, once you get the knack, and it is one of the healthiest of exercises.

"The reformed boxer still takes an interest in the manly art of buffeting and lugging, and he says Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion, was one of his boyhood idols.

"There was the perfect boxer," he said, "I tried to model myself after him in the ring. Another of my early idols was a famous physical culturist who had developed his body marvelously. I saw him at work in a gymnasium and made up my mind to perfect my own body in a similar manner. So well did I accomplish this plan that I was remarkably short time. I was virtually by double my proportions fallied almost exactly."

RESEMBLES VALENTINO

Despite critic's comment on the subject of public perfection, I merely preach the gospel of what training and preparation have done for me, for I know they can be made to do the same for other persons.

I suggested that Suther, Pietro Campbell, Babe Pearce, Lipscomb, Valentine, Hendricks and Armstrong, the last mentioned for becoming the double of Ethel Clayton, great lover of the screen.

BENNY LEONARD "OUT ON HIS SKATES"

RETIRED BOXING CHAMP TAKES UP HOCKEY

Benny Leonard, retired undefeated lightweight boxing champion, found hockey to be "something different" when he worked out with his Pirates at Duquesne Garden last night. Benny started out in fair fashion, but as soon as his ankles weakened his skates played him false and he took several nasty wallops on a spot other than his chin. After going down 12 times in six minutes, or oftener than in his entire boxing career, Benny grasped the "ropes" to save himself from fall No. 13. Referee Odie Cleghorn, realizing that the finish was near, is seen standing over the bruised and groggy Benah with hand upraised ready to start the count.

STEEL OUTPUT RECEDES

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The Iron Age says:

Steel production, although still heavy, has receded from the record breaking rate of October. The reduced raw material needs of steel works have tended to relieve the tension in the pig iron market, notably in the valleys, and have been reflected in another decline in heavy melting scrap at Pittsburgh—the third drop of 25 cents a ton in three consecutive weeks.

Steel prices remain buoyant.

In the Greater Pittsburgh district ingot production now averages 85 per cent, compared with a recent rate of over 90 per cent. Steel Corporation subsidiaries are operating at 80 per cent of capacity, against 85 per cent last week.

Another rise in The Iron Age pig iron composite price—the ninth in three months—has pushed it up to $18.50 a ton, the highest figure since July, 1927. Last week it was $18.34. Finished steel remains at 2.359 cents a pound.

VESTRIS RADIO OPERATOR HAILED NEW HERO OF SEA

By WILLIAM S. NEAL.
International News Service.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 14.—Under a pale new moon 225 miles off Cape Henry, the big battleship Wyoming and three U. S. Coast Guard cutters patiently circled and zigzagged the rough waters of the Atlantic throughout the night in the faint hope that some other lives may be saved from the wreck of the Vestris.

It was at best only a faint hope. Veterans of many sea struggles in the treacherous waters off these Virginia capes declared there was none at all, but the four government vessels stuck doggedly at their task upon orders from Washington, and at dawn this morning their searchlights are still raking the waters for traces of the persons still unaccounted for in the catastrophe.

TOO COLD TO LIVE

The temperature of the waters where the Vestris went down is estimated at from 40 to 45 degrees. Marine veterans here do not believe it possible that men or women could stand this for three nights on a raft, or in an open boat, with a heavy sea running all the time, as it has been since the wreck.

The Wyoming probably will give up the search today and put in for Norfolk. Admiral Taylor reported last night that in his judgment further search was useless, but the Navy Department requested him to stay on. The coast guard cutters will continue the search after the Wyoming leaves. The Wyoming has eight survivors aboard, five women and three Negro members of the crew.

Seafaring men who have followed every step of the Vestris disaster, today acclaimed a new hero of the seas in M. J. O'Laughlin, the radio operator of the Lamport and Holt liner.

Though puzzled by the action of some of the guiding hands of the liner as constructed from meager radio reports, veterans of the Navy and Coast Guard here have only unstinted praise for O'Laughlin. The radio operator stayed with the ship to the last. While others were taking to lifeboats and a worried crew and frantic passengers were seeking safety, O'Laughlin remained to repeat the "SOS" call, and as best he could to give rescuers the information necessary for their task.

The log of the ship, as reported to Naval officers here, showed that from 9:58 a. m. Monday until 1:25 p. m., O'Laughlin was constantly engaged in sending messages. Even though the generator went out at 12:45, indicating that the engine room was flooded, he remained on the job.

Although naval and coast guard officers and other seamen here have no reason to doubt reports that shifting of cargo caused the Vestris disaster, many are unable to understand how this could occur on a mixed passenger and cargo vessel, which was rated as 100 per cent by Lloyds. One explanation advanced by coast guardsmen was that bursting of a sea valve and failure of a water tight compartment to function caused the sinking.

Thomas Evans, assistant steward.

Rubber Companies Should Improve; Explains Hedging

By B. C. FORBES

BRITAIN'S artificial regulation of rubber prices having ended this month, American rubber companies are more hopeful of being able to earn acceptable dividends for their stockholders. No industry has suffered more from violent fluctuations in the cost of ray material. Rubber has fluctuated all the way between 12 cents a pound and $1.21 a pound.

This has made rubber manufacturing largely a gamble. And the odds have proved against the owners (stockholders) of rubber manufacturing companies.

A reader wants to know why rubber manufacturers have not followed the example of cotton manufacturers, for example, by "hedging" against contracts made for future deliveries of manufactured goods.

The explanation is interesting.

HEDGING means covering one's raw material requirements to fill a contract. There is always a market for dealing in cotton "futures:" that is to say, you can place an order at any season of the year, at a specified time, for delivery of cotton at any later date desired. Thus the cotton manufacturer largely eliminates gambling in his raw material costs.

A rubber exchange having been established in New York, also providing for dealing in "futures," why do not rubber manufacturers try to protect themselves against fluctuations in the cost of rubber?

I put this question to a rubber manufacturer whom I regard as one of the ablest in the industry, and here is his reply, which throws light on other phases of the rubber business:

"Hedges in the rubber business are not as good as in cotton because the great bulk of rubber is used by the tire factories and anything that affects the tire business immediately affects the rubber market; consequently you haven't got a broad enough market to operate in successfully.

"Practically 70 per cent of the world's rubber is used in this country. This is not true of cotton. Anything that affects the tire market in this country affects the rubber market. The real market for rubber is London, but the real consuming of rubber is in this country. A certain amount of hedging can be done. A miller can hedge wheat much easier than a large tire manufacturer can hedge rubber. By the way, the rubber market is the only market in the world that works on three shifts. We have Singapore, London and New York.

"FURTHERMORE, the nature of rubber is different from cotton. Rubber is not a yearly crop. It is not affected by weather conditions. When there is too much rubber, there is liable to be too much rubber for quite a while, and vice versa. This is the reason you have so much governmental tampering with the rubber market. Furthermore, a large percentage of the tire business is sold to retailers and the contracts or orders are not firm orders. The cotton manufacturer secures an order which is a firm order at a fixed price and can hedge his position.

"The basic thing that has been wrong with certain rubber companies who have lost in the crude rubber market so that it affects their earning statement is that they sell on an absurd form of contract to the car manufacturer. It's the kind of contract they lose on whether the market goes up or down. The only time they can win is when the market is stable.

"Did you ever stop to think that the car manufacturer isn't greatly interested in the quality of the tires he puts on his cars because they are the only thing on his car for which he bears no responsibility to his buying public?

"Against my better judgment I went into the rubber pool a few years back. We lost plenty on the rubber pool this year."

ARTIFICIAL schemes to regulate prices have more often than not proved failures in the end. Britain planned to control rubber prices by withholding the supply from the market and feeding it out in increasing quantities only as the price was marked higher and higher. This created international friction which at one time threatened to become a grave political issue between America and Britain. Secretary of Commerce Hoover ardently championed America's cause. Now the whole plan has been abandoned as unworkable.

Rubber is quoted on the New York rubber exchange this week around 18¼ cents per pound, which must be regarded as very low—in fact, producers claim that current prices are below the cost of production in most places.

Now that foreigners have dropped their selling pool, it is to be hoped that no fresh friction will develop through any resented pool buying operations by the industry in this country.

Natural markets—like most natural things—are the best in the end.

Coolidge and Hoover, Both Hating War, Agree That Adequate Defense Always Is Best Guarantee of Peace

THE sound common sense of Calvin Coolidge, his transcendent virtue in the eyes of his countrymen, was never more in evidence than in his Armistice Day speech Sunday evening in Washington, under the auspices of the American Legion.

It was a preparedness speech, peculiarly effective because it was made by a man who hates war and has been the world's chief advocate of measures of peace. He said:

"While we are placing our faith in more complete understandings which shall harmonize with the universal conscience, we ought not to forget that all the rights we now possess, the peace we now enjoy, have been secured for us by a long series of sacrifices and of conflicts. * * *

"Every dictate of humanity constantly cries aloud that we do not want any more war. We ought to take every precaution and make every honorable sacrifice, however great, to prevent it. Still, the first law of progress requires the world to face facts, and it is equally plain that reason and conscience are as yet by no means supreme in human affairs. The inherited instinct of selfishness is very far from being eliminated; the forces of evil are exceedingly powerful."

The President recounts the history of his futile attempts to have the naval powers adopt the same principle of disarmament in cruisers which we adopted when we sacrificed our battleships. He tells how, during the years of negotiation, the British have continued building cruisers:

"When their present legislation is carried out they would have sixty-eight cruisers. When ours is carried out, we would have forty. It is obvious that, eliminating all competition, world standards of defense require us to have more cruisers."

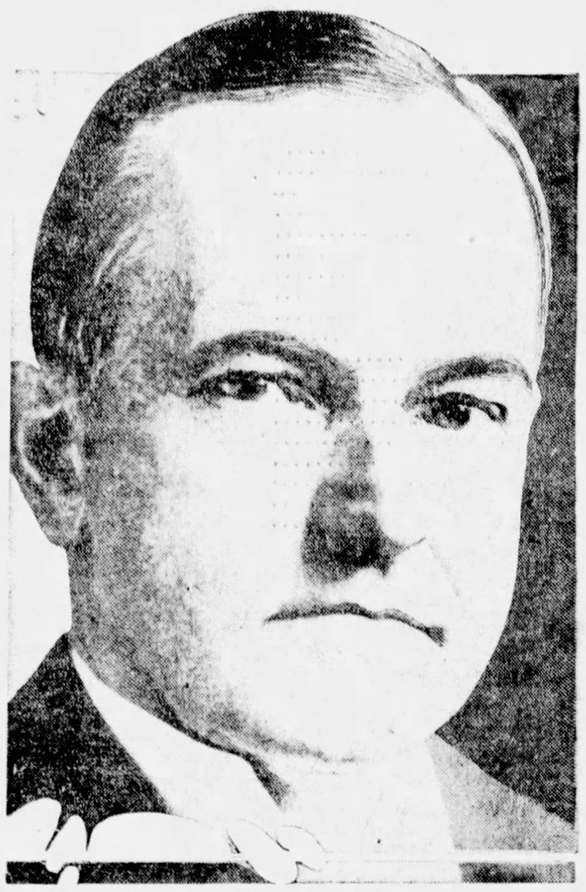
THE President refers to the secret Anglo-French naval-military compact, which incidentally, the Hearst papers discovered and published:

"During last Summer France and England made a tentative offer which would limit the kind of cruisers and submarines adapted to the use of the United States, but left without limit the kind adapted to their use. The United States, of course, refused to accept this offer. Had we not done so, the French army and the English navy would be so near unlimited that the principle of limitations would be virtually abandoned."



CALVIN COOLIDGE: "All human experience seems to demonstrate that the country which makes reasonable preparations for defense is less likely to be subject to a hostile attack, and less likely to suffer a violation of its rights which might lead to war."

HERBERT HOOVER: "We know that in an armed world there is only one certain guarantee of freedom—and that is preparedness for defense. * * * We must maintain our navy and our army in such fashion that we shall have complete defense of our homes from even the fear of foreign invasion."

With regard to the war debts of European nations to the United States, the President restates his position that this country had already been more than generous in dealing with our debtors:

"Much of our position is already revealed by the record. It can truthfully be characterized as one of patience, consideration, restraint and assistance. We have accepted settlement of obligations, not in accordance with what was due but in accordance with the merciful principle of what our debtors could pay."

HE reminds Europe that our people loaned $110,000,000 to Germany to put the Dawes plan into operation, thus securing evacuation of the Ruhr. And he tells how our people in effect have supplied the money to pay a large part of the German reparations.

"Since 1924 Germany has paid on reparations account about $1,300,000,000, and our people have lent to national, state and municipal governments and to corporations in Germany a little over $1,100,000,000. It could not be claimed that this money is the entire source from which reparations have been directly paid, but it must have been a large factor in rendering Germany able to pay."

He urges that we go slow with further loans to Europe and use our savings primarily to develop our own country:

"England is placing very considerable loans abroad; France has had large credits abroad, some of which have been called home. Both are making very large outlays for military purposes. . . . The needs of our own people require that any further advances by us must have most careful consideration."

IT takes only a cursory examination of Herbert Hoover's post-nomination speeches to realize how thoroughly he is in accord with President Coolidge's philosophy of preparedness. Here are some of the things Mr. Hoover has said in his acceptance speech and later addresses:

"We know that in an armed world there is one certain guarantee of freedom—and that is preparedness for defense." (Acceptance speech.)

"Foreign trade thrives only with maintained good-will and mutual interests with other nations. One of these mutual interests lies in the protection of American citizens in their property abroad and the protection of foreign citizens in our borders. . . . Unless there can be constantly evidenced among all nations that the lives and property of all citizens abroad shall be protected, the foreign trade and economic life of the world will degenerate instead of thrive." (Boston speech).

"If foreign loans are applied to constructive development in foreign lands, and if they are provided from capital beyond that which we require for our own needs, then they are necessarily beneficial.

"All of the facts I have stated show that the increased buying power of foreign countries applies equally to their ability to pay loans and interest. The $320,000,000 annually due us upon war debt settlements represents less than 5 per cent of the total annual buying power of foreign countries for our goods and other purposes. Their buying power from us is constantly increasing." (Boston speech).

"We must maintain our navy and our army in such fashion that we shall have complete defense of our homes from even the fear of foreign invasion. We must assure a sound merchant marine to safeguard our overseas trade against foreign discrimination." (Elizabethton speech.)

IT may be expected that Congress will listen to the concordant advice of the retiring President and his successor. We have reason to expect a period of national preparedness, an era of freedom from domination by internationalists, visionary pacifists and propagandists of foreign governments.

One Thing We Need Here Is Diversified Industry

For many years we have been aware that the rail and river tonnage of Pittsburgh exceeds that of any center in the world. It was stated anew when T. A. Dunn, vice president of the Chamber of Commerce, addressing the Electrical League of Pittsburgh, informed his hearers that Pittsburgh's 211,000,000 tons in 1925 exceeded the combined tonnage of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Liverpool. It is well that this fact be repeated periodically. It serves to remind us of our commercial importance. Also that it may not mean as much as we think it does.

We could easily lose some of that tonnage. In fact we have lost a great deal of river coal traffic—to the South. There is no pessimism behind the speculation that the advance of electricity may in time do away with coal shipments altogether through "shipment" of coal from the mine to the consumer over wires in the form of power. Years ago a summary of Pittsburgh river tonnage would have included lumber. Where is that tonnage now?

We don't miss the raftsman and the business he brought to Pittsburgh because he is of the long ago, but don't you think that the old hotels and vanished business places near the rivers felt the loss of his trade when he came no more? In place of the lumber trade we got something else. We have no apprehension about coal, but everybody knows it isn't what it used to be. What takes its place?

We should have a more diversified industry. Steel, of course, is our trade, and we should give it our greatest attention, encouraging and fostering it, concentrating to a large extent on metallurgical industries. Metallic specialties offer a large field for cultivation. The district also appears to be significantly inviting to the chemical industry. There are many lines we should seek. Sheffield, center of the steel industry in England, has a vast cutlery trade. Pittsburgh, center of steel in America, has small business, proportionately, in that line, if any.

These comments are just a reminder that we should not depend too much on our tonnage reports. We should dig in and make them greater.

Bible Passages

"Where Wast Thou?"

Job 38: 4-17)

WHERE wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding.

Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it?

Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened? or who laid the corner stone thereof;

When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?

Or who shut up the sea with doors, when it brake forth, as if it had issued out of the womb?

When I made the cloud the garment therof, and thick darkness a swaddlingband for it,

And brake up for it my decreed place, and set bars and doors,

And said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further: and here shall thy proud waves be stayed?

Hast thou commanded the morning since thy days; and caused the dayspring to know his place;

That it might take hold of the ends of the earth, that the wicked might be shaken out of it?

It is turned as clay to the seal; and they stand as a garment.

And from the wicked their light is withholden, and the high arm shall be broken.

Hast thou entered into the springs of the sea? or hast thou walked in the search of the depth?

Have the gates of death been opened unto thee? or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow of death?

Isn't It So?

There are few thieves where there is little to steal.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

THIS country has just taken a fall out of me and given me a lesson I've needed badly.

Like most newspaper people, I'm a bit of an alarmist. Always looking for the worst, and finding it. Easy enough to find it in my job. Someone's always shooting up somebody else—getting drunk or divorced—life, in my office, is just one explosion after another. So naturally I concluded the whole nation was exploding.

Well, a couple of months ago I took a swing around. Went rambling over the mountains and deserts, down the rivers and across the plains and into the cities, sticking my nose into things in general. And of course, looking for trouble—Awful Examples and Dire Portents—and getting myself all set to broadcast the bad news of America's Peril as soon as I got the dirt.

I'm still going but I haven't done any broadcasting yet. For, as I mentioned before, this country has taken a fall out of me.

IN SPITE OF MY MOST EARNEST EFFORTS TO UNEARTH THE SAME I CAN'T FIND ANY AMERICAN PERIL!

WE'RE NOT GOING TO THE DOGS WORTH A CENT!

In short, much as I hate to admit it from a news angle—AMERICA'S SAFE!

I thought we were getting fat and lazy and snooty and generally full of fleas—

I thought we'd lost our old-time spunk and faith—

But I'm here to eat my words—AMERICA'S SAFE!

I've seen our men and women working their little clearings in the Southern swamps—

I've seen them riding herd on lonely mesas—

And harvesting under a broiling sun on Texas farms—

And sinking shafts on desolate mountain ranges—

I've seen them bargaining for soup vegetables at the street stands of New York—

And teaching their babies to swim on the banks of the Mississippi—

And building homes from railroad ties on the desert—

And gathering pumpkins in Ohio—

And always they've been laughing and loving and sticking by the simple code of their fathers—always they've been kind to strangers, loyal to their homes—always they've kept the faith—

So I'm here to say—don't pay any attention to what we alarmists say—AMERICA'S SAFE! SHE'S SAFE IN THE HANDS OF AMERICANS!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

DO YOU feel uneasy in the presence of one who seems to analyze you? You fear the estimate made may prove to be accurate.

This not only annoys you—it seems to take your self-reliance.

If your offences have not been of a serious nature, there is no reason why you should feel uncomfortable before a man who realizes your weaknesses.

Practically every person is weak in one way or another.

Few people would care to be known at their true value.

There may not be grave mistakes, but there are usually things in every person's life that he or she prefers to keep out of the public eye.

If your frailities are grave in nature, why don't you try harder to overcome them?

The effort that you make will strengthen you and give you more confidence in yourself.

Your will may be weak, but if you are in earnest about improvement, you can master yourself, and then you need not be afraid of any man's criticism.

You will remain weak as long as you fear any man.

Tales That Are Told

He Went to Bed

"MOTHER," said a little boy, "what does 'trans-Atlantic' mean?"

"Oh, across the Atlantic, of course. Don't bother me!"

"Does 'trans' always mean across?"

"I suppose it does. If you don't stop bothering me with your questions I shall send you to bed!"

"Then does 'transparent' mean a cross parent, mother?"

Hush Money

"I WOULD like an increase in salary, sir; I'm going to be married."

"And you would like to have a little bigger fund to draw on for household expenses?"

"No, it isn't that. My future wife knows exactly how much I get. I should like a little extra for my own use that she doesn't know about."

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

THE Scotchman has been staying out of stories for weeks now, I believe. We better drag him in again, or people will forget about him. This here Scotchman was traveling all over in his car, and he stopped at a first-class hotel in a big town and started to register.

"How much for a room?" he says.

"We got 'em for $10 a day and up."

"How much for garage for my car?"

"We don't charge anything for garage."

"How much will breakfast be?"

"A dollar."

"Well," says the Scot, "put me down for garage and breakfast. I'd like to take a room, just to oblige you, but I gotta sleep in the car on account of a bet."

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Long Island as well as fashionable Westchester has hoity-toity establishments for conditioning dogs that offer the grandeur of a de luxe barber shop. One must achieve the Social Register or at least have a realtive who plays polo to secure admission.

They occupy especially constructed buildings, but to thwart bomb tossers, no addresses will be given. Many are as expensive as a magnificent hotel. People, who have the absurd notion a plush pillow and a silken monogrammed coverlet mean something in a dog's life are heavy patrons.

Attendants in snow white uniforms, even to white shoes, add to the whatever you might call it. There are glorified baths where dogs are soaped, scrubbed and flossed up and partitioned solariums where they may rest on luxurious blankets to be dried in the sun.

The are plucked scientifically and their nails are clipped with sterilized instruments. Also electrical massaging machines, exercising runways and in one there are ramps evidently so the dog will not have to walk up or down tiresome steps.

The only value of such nonsense is that expert trainers are employed to teach dogs to heed and to improve their house manners. In a way they are dog colleges where the pup is taken and in about six weeks becomes a polite and excellently behaved animal.

They are scientifically fed from germless aluminum containers and their teeth are cleaned daily. One has a weekly rate of $60. Strangely enough, dogs under such scientific fol de rol are always developing unheard of maladies while those left to natural bent reach ripe years.

The highly pedigreed canine is insured against death and accident and in case he nips a stranger the owner is protected. In one kennel I visited the attendant said there were seven dogs valued at from $2,000 to $5,000. But a real dog owner would not think of placing a monetary value on his lowliest mutt.

He came drifting into a night club after 2 a. m., sitting alone at a ringside table in immaculate splendor. He seemed unconscious of those about him while sipping at his drink. Finally there was a piercing scream and a lady romped for the exit. Other ladies dittoed. Around the gentleman's dinner coat collar and up and down his lapels raced a white mouse. After a time he calmly picked it up, restored it to his pocket and returned to his drink. What do you make of it, Watson?

And on a big estate near Roslyn there is a full grown elephant which is there merely for the amusement of the kiddies. That's taking the big kick out of a circus!

Ye Olde Time Note: One of New York's well-known travelers still carries a coiling of fire rope with him wherever he goes. In five hotel fires he escaped by leaping out high windows with pantaloons in one hand and his valise in the other, and is a little knee sprung as a result. He takes no more chances.

"How would you like," writes a renting agent, "to lease a 10-room apartment which has a phone in each room, private elevator, two secret entrances, a private solarium and a private pool."

It doesn't interest me. I couldn't possibly get along without a private mail chute.
